Senate Approves Joint Study of Budget and Taxes

House Leaders Oppose Plan; Economy Urged In Appropriations

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved the Harrison resolution creating a special 24-man committee of both Houses to agree on tax and budget policies within the $45,000,000,000 statutory debt limit.

The "super" fiscal study resolution was sent to the House, where it encountered a stone wall of opposition from the leadership. A separate Senate survey may be launched if the House fails to act.

The House Appropriations Committee inaugurated an economy program of its own, voting, 14 to 11, to limit morally each of its subcommittee to the budget totals for individual departments and agencies.

The House Appropriations resolution was sponsored by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, leader of a coalition economy bloc. The motion placed no limit on cuts. It would allow subcommittees to shift individual items, but maintain the budget ceiling on the total of each bill. Apparently this would bar in committee an increase of $225,000,000 in the agriculture bill for unbudgeted farm parity payments.

President Urges Economy

In two hours' brisk debate on the fiscal study resolution, the Senate heard charges that the President "outsmarted" Congress in his budget message, slashed pet projects he knew Congress would vote to restore, and "with a twinkle in his eye has put this babe on our doorstep."

But at an unheralded White House conference, the President told members of the House Democratic Steering Committee that Congress should stay within his $8,424,000,000 budget total and do nothing to break through the $45,000,000,000 national-debt limitation.

Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, led the 15-man House Democratic policy group to the White House at the President's call. The President's budget carried 1941 estimates of appropriations to within $61,422,000 of the statutory debt limit provided $460,000,000 of emergency defense taxes are levied.

Trade, Defense Discussed

Conferees said Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that he did not want Congress to take any action that would necessitate an increase in the debt limit. In the half-hour conference, the President discussed also his reciprocal trade, national defense and tax recommendations to Congress.

Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Oklahoma, vice chairman of the group, reportedly told the President that people in his section were not impressed with doubled merchant marine estimates, while some American vessels are being sold and flood control and other estimates are being cut.

Setting off the round of economy developments, the resolution by Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, to frame an over-all policy controlling appropriations and taxes within existing debt limitation, passed the Senate viva voce without objection.

House Says It's Too Late

But House appropriation chiefs and majority leaders reiterated their objections that the move came "too late" to control appropriation bills. These started moving into the House yesterday with the $267,197,908 deficiency defense bill. As an economy starter, the committee cut that bill $4,801,615 below budget.

If the Senate resolution is sidetracked in the House, a new move

House Passes Lynch Bill, 252 to 131

Southerners' Moves To Amend Measure Beaten on Floor

By the Associated Press

The House approved one of its perennial election-year favorites, the anti-lynching bill, yesterday and sent it to the Senate where an unyielding Southern filibuster was set to kill it.

The vote of 252 to 131 followed a discussion in which Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, asserted that the measure was "nothing but the renewal of a vicious attack on the white people of the Southern States," coming not from the Republicans, he said, but from the Democrats.

Amendments Beaten

All Southern efforts to amend the measure were crushed under a massive voting combination of Republicans and Democrats from the North and West. The same fate met an effort by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, inveterate foe of the C. I. O., to attach provisions intended to restrict picketing.

The single change accepted was offered by the author of the measure, Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York, who represents the District of which New York City's Harlem is a part. He proposed the elimination of language making the bill inapplicable to any violence resulting from a labor disturbance. Gavagan explained that the provision was unnecessary because the bill could not possibly be interpreted as applying to labor situations.

Gangster Proposal Loses

The bill—denounced by Southerners as impractical, unenforceable and unconstitutional and upheld by its supporters in the antonyms of those words—seeks to eliminate lynchings by imposing penalties on peace officers negligent in protecting their prisoners from lynch-mobs and by

Finn Troops Surround New Division

Action Occurs 60 Miles South of Recent Victories; Russians In Flight at Raate

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Jan. 10.—Finnish troops in central Finland were reported to have surrounded a new Soviet division today after hurling the remnants of the routed Red Army's Forty-fourth and 163d divisions back into Russia east of Suomussalmi.

This third Russian division was reported trapped at Kukkammo, about 60 miles south of the recent victories at Suomussalmi.

There were no reports today from the Salla front, 125 miles north of Suomussalmi, where yesterday Finnish troops were said to be surrounding a fourth Russian division.

It was disclosed today that some elements of the Red Army's 164th division were involved in the defeat of the Forty-fourth, and it was believed that the Russian division now endangered south of Suomussalmi might be the remainder of the 164th.

Establish 30-Mile Line

The Finns set up positions along 30 miles of the Russian frontier east of Lake Kianta and Suomussalmi. This covers four points at which Finland has thrown the invaders back onto their own soil.

A Finnish communique said that a Red Army battalion had been dispersed northeast of Lake Ladoga with the enemy leaving "200 dead on the field." The Finns took 40 prisoners.

"At Suomassalmi our troops, advancing in the direction of Raate, have reached the frontier and cleared the area of enemy troops," the communique said.

Associated Press Correspondent Thomas F. Hawkins, withthe Finnish Army at Raate, reported the Russians in full flight as the Finns drove right up to the border in cleaning up operations.

It was the first time the Suomussalmi sector has been cleared of Russians since the war started.

Vast Stores Captured

Hawkins, recounting the huge war stores left on the battlefield by the fleeing Red Army, said that evidence on the Russian bodies indicated the Forty-fourth Division was one of the Red army's crack units engaged in the Polish campaign.

He found the town of Suomussalmi demolished by savage warfare, with only blackened chimneys and shell-riddled frame buildings left standing.

Hundreds of Russian shells, guns, trucks and tanks were seen abandoned along the 4½-mile stretch of twisting highway which served as a battlefield for the Forty-fourth Red Division and attacking Finnish troops.

A Finnish colonel at Raate told the Associated Press that Finland's losses in the battles against the 44th and 163d divisions were comparatively small, "although there are casualties, of course, in a heavy battle."

Dionne Quints May Appear at Fair This Year

Toronto, Jan. 10 (AP).—Visitors to the New York World's Fair next summer may get a peek at the chubby Dionne quintuplets.

Dozenberg Won 'Certain King' With Photos of Court Ladies

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 10.—Nicholas Dozenberg, of Washington, D. C., said by the Government to have been a member of the Soviet secret police, pleaded guilty today to misuse of passports obtained through false representations, and indicated he would testify against his erstwhile American Communist Party chief, Earl Browder, on similar charges.

At the same time, Federal authorities said privately he had told an extraordinary story of military espionage in a European country which they identified only as one which might be regarded as standing in the way of Russian expansion.

This story—which might conceivably come out in Browder's trial, set for January 15—was along these lines:

Dozenberg, a pale little middle-aged man with a lined face and a weary manner, went to the European country carrying an American passport and by taking photographs of certain ladies of the court so ingratiated himself with a friend of the ruler that he wangled an introduction to that dignitary.

Then, through the ensuing friendship, he was able to borrow the

Diet Hostile, Abe To Quit as Premier

Japanese Leader Blamed for Effects of War

By Wilfrid Fleischer.

(This dispatch has been considerably censored)

Tokyo (Thursday), Jan. 11.—Premier Abe has decided to resign and the formal resignation of the cabinet is expected to take place early next week, after senior statesmen have settled on the choice of a successor.

It is explained officially the political change has been held in abeyance until after the meeting of the Privy Council Saturday, which is to ratify the extension of the fishery convention with the Soviet Union, and in order to expedite plans for the creation of the new China regime under Wang Ching-Wei.

Lieut. Gen. Heisuke Yanagawa, chief of the air force, left here yesterday by airplane for Nanking to meet with Japanese officials in China and lay before them the government's decision regarding Japan's support for the new regime.

The downfall of the Abe cabinet is due directly to the growing parliamentary opposition to the government which has now become almost unanimous, and to Premier Abe's realization that it would be impossible for his cabinet to face the Diet without a formal vote of non-confidence.

The opposition of Diet members to the government is the result of internal economic conditions. These are the result of the China war, but the public blames the cabinet and there is a feeling that a new cabinet might do better.

Air Commissar 'Transferred,' Moscow Says

Newcomer in Stalin Council Succeeds To Kaganovich Post

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 10.—Mikhail M. Kaganovich, commissar for Soviet Russia's aviation industry, has been relieved of his duties and "transferred to another post," the official Tass News Agency announced tonight.

His successor is M. Shakhurin, a newcomer among the commissars.

Appointed as assistants to Shakhurin were Y. A. Yakovleff, chairman of the credentials committee of the all-union congress, and Prof. Voronin, long recognized in Russia as an authority in airplane construction and design.

Kaganovich, brother of Lazarus Kaganovich, a confidant of Josef Stalin and administrator in several successive key posts of the Soviet, formerly was assistant commissar of defense industry and in that capacity visited Washington in 1937.

He was interested in promoting Soviet Russian distance flights over the polar route to the United States in 1937, and subsequently became defense industry commissar.

Press Assails Britain

In that post he planned production of airplanes by assembly-line, mass-production methods, and set the production of better tanks, guns and airplanes at a faster clip as his goal.

Last January the commissariat of defense industry was broken up into four divisions, Kaganovich taking the aviation division.

(It was not indicated whether the shift was in connection with Russian reverses in the war with Finland, which the Soviets acknowledged last night for the first time when they admitted a withdrawal of "several kilometers" on the Soumussalmi front.)

Japan Warns French to Halt Guns for China

Jan. 23 Deadline Set To Stop Shipments From Its Colony

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, Jan. 10.—The Japanese navy and army have served notice secretly upon French authorities that munitions shipments over the Haiphong-Yunnan railway into Kunming must cease by January 23 or Japanese aerial bombers will destroy every bridge on the railway between Kunming and French Indo-China.

The French military authorities at Shanghai last week approached the Japanese military authorities asking the cessation of destructive bombing on that portion of the railway lying within Chinese borders.

The French are understood to have told the Japanese that there has already landed at French Indo-China ports enough munitions, grenades, artillery, Bren guns and machine guns to tax the railway's hauling capacity for two months.

These materials are all of Austrian or Czecho-Slovakian manufacture but China bought them from Germany under a barter agreement before the European war; therefore they are not subject to French seizure.

French press notices that if the Japanese ruin the railway these war supplies will be transshipped via Rangoon and will reach China over the Burma highway failed to change the Japanese determination.

Stimson Asks U. S. to Prohibit Arms, War Goods Sale to Japan

New York, Jan. 10.—Former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson proposed in a letter to the New York Times today that Congress pass one of the four bills now before it to prohibit the export of arms, munitions or raw materials to Japan.

A comparatively small number of individual Americans, he charged, have been aiding Japanese aggression in China for three years. He identified them as "chiefly the merchants who are selling to Japan the ore, steel and scrap iron indispensable for her bombs, and the large oil producers who are selling to her the even more indispensable aviation gasoline for her planes."

He urged the State Department to extend the "moral embargo" now effective on the export of airplanes and machinery to manufacture special aviation gasoline to the export of these additional articles, but did not think this would be enough. He felt legislation was needed in order to impress Japan "with the seriousness of the feeling of our people as to this matter."

The passage of such legislation, he continued, would show "the emphasis we place upon right conduct in international relations and particularly upon the treaty for which we are mainly responsible, undertaking to respect the integrity and independence of China," and would do more than anything else to impress the Japanese people "with the sincerity of our purpose."

Such an expression of American disapproval, he argued, would ultimately help produce a reversal of the policy of the Japanese army leaders, without which, he said, "the stable equilibrium of eastern Asia, in which the United States is so deeply interested and which is now menaced by Japan's attack upon China, can not be restored."

It would also show the world, he continued, "that this nation recognizes its responsibility for making

British Raid Nazi Bases In North Sea

Swift Bombers Reply To 'Blitzkrieg' Hint; 40 Planes Involved, According to Danes

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 10.—Fast new British bombers struck back today at Germany's air and sea strength, raiding German air bases on the North Sea island of Sylt and an important Helgoland anchorage in swift reply to the first warning flesh of the vaunted Nazi "blitzkrieg."

The crash of antiaircraft fire, vivid flashes, the dancing pencils of searchlights and the roar of many planes told observers on the Danish coastline and islands of the first battle over Sylt, shortly before dawn.

Residents of the Danish town of Tonder said they believed the British bombers, in day-long attacks, had scored hits on the Hindenburg causeway which connects Sylt with the mainland.

At Least 40 Planes Involved

They said three bombs fell in the afternoon and that one of them appeared to have struck the causeway. All train traffic to the mainland was stopped.

Reports from various sources indicated there were at least three battles over Sylt and one at sea, above Helgoland Bight. The Sylt battles were before dawn; at 9 a. m. (3 a. m. Eastern standard time) and between 3:30 and 6 p. m. (9:30 a. m. to 12 noon, Eastern standard time). The air fight over the sea was believed to have occurred about 1 p. m. (7 a. m., Eastern standard time).

The air ministry announced one British plane had been lost in a half hour running fight "far out over the North Sea" when an R. A. F. formation met a number of long-range German fighters. It said, however, that the German planes were beaten off and that the British formation continued "to the easterly limit of its reconnaissance" and back.

This compared with German contentions that three out of nine British Bristol Blenheim bombers had been shot down over Helgoland Bight by four German planes.

The British communique said one German fighter had been shot down and forced to land in Denmark.

Bombs on Danish Soil

Still later reports said a second of the 370-mile-an-hour German Messerschmidt fighters had been seen to fall in the sea.

The Helgoland anchorage which also was bombed by the British was not further identified. It was said to be "heavily fortified," however.

Danish dispatches said 40 or more British and German planes were involved in the air battles around Sylt.

While thet Royal Air force thus carried the aerial war into Germany's domain, British naval vessels closer home were sowing some

San Francisco, Jan. 10 (AP).—Roy Gardner, 56, notorious mail robber and escape artist of the early 20's, killed himself with poison gas tonight in a hotel room.

Walsh Demands 'Paper Navy' Be Converted Into Warships

By John G. Norris

Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, yesterday advised the Nation to build warships already authorized as a course preferable to authorizing new naval programs.

Telling the Senate about $1,000,000,000 in naval tonnage remains to be built under the 1938 naval expansion act, Walsh challenged the need at this time for the $1,300,000,000 Navy authorization bill now before the House Naval Committee.

"The paper Navy we already have authorized should be made into a real Navy before we have another paper Navy," he contended. "In other words, I think that the Navy for which we have already provided a billion should be built and more money asked for in order that we may have an adequate and satisfactory fleet."

Walsh presented tables showing that one battleship, 6 cruisers, 37 destroyers, 10 submarines and auxiliaries can be laid down now.

Naval officials stressed the need, however, for dealing now with the question of the proper ultimate strength for the Navy, rather than waiting until an emergency arises, and said that under the current

47 Escape, 2 Dead Are Found; Rescue Crews Half Mile Away

By the Associated Press

Bartley, W. Va., Jan. 10.—An explosion, possibly presaging the worst West Virginia mine disaster in more than a decade, killed at least two men and entombed 86 others 2 miles underground today.

W. C. Sturgiss, a district mine inspector, announced shortly before midnight that the number of men trapped had been revised from 85. Forty-seven escaped.

J. J. Hammond, company official, said at midnight that after hours of checking it had been almost definitely determined there were 93 men at work on the day shift in the western side of the mine. Five had completed work and left and two were found dead, leaving 86 unaccounted for, he said.

There were reports that the known death list was seven but both company and mine department officials said nothing was known of the fate of the men, except for the two found dead a half mile in.

Rescuers a Half-Mile Away

Eight rescue crews dug their way toward three blast-wrecked sections of the mine but progress was slow and midnight found them still 2,500 feet from the estimated location of the disaster.

Three hundred men stood by above ground, to help when needed.

Sturgiss expressed the opinion that a group of 25 miners in the "fourth left" area of the mine had the "best chance" of surviving. He did not speculate on the fate of the others.

H. G. Houtz, chief engineer for the States Mines Department said, however, the chances were "slim" that the men had been able to build barricades and conserve what pure air remained in the affected areas.

Officials of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Corporation, owners of the mine, remained hopeful that a majority of the men had escaped.

Vice President R. E. Salvati reported that the 47 men in the eastern section of the operation came out unscathed at 4 p. m., unaware there had been a blast.

One of the dead men, whose bodies were found a half-mile from the bottom of the 620-foot shaft, was identified as Charley Moffitt. The other was not identified.

Cause Undetermined

The cause of the blast was undetermined, although Sturgiss said it was possible the men had cut through to some long unused, gas-filled entry. The mine was known to be gaseous but was thoroughly rock-dusted.

On the western side the tunnel leaves the foot of the shaft and runs back several thousand feet and branches.

Sturgiss fixed the time at 2:20 p. m. He said:

"Twenty-five men in the fourth left have a better chance than any others, providing the explosion occurred in main 6, and indications are that is true."

United States Bureau of Mines rescue cars were ordered from Eckman, McDowell County, and from Pittsburgh. Oxygen equipment was on hand at the shaft mouth, manned by crews ready to help any who were brought out alive.

Progress toward the blast sector was slow and mine department officials said the ventilating system had to be rebuilt as the crews moved ahead. The main ventilating system of the mine continued in operation.

Between 1,000 and 2,000 persons stood outside a roped area 300 feet from the mine, warming themselves at bonfires.

Another inclosure was roped off about 75 feet from the tipple and into this area gathered more than a hundred wives and relatives of the men caught below.

Associated Gas Files Petition To Reorganize

Action Begun Under Bankruptcy Law After SEC Cuts Off Revenue

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Reorganization proceedings under the bankruptcy law were begun by top holding companies in the giant Associated Gas & Electric Co. system following a ruling by the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday on dividend payments.

The commission shut off revenue sources of Associated Gas & Electric Co., the parent holding company, by refusing permission to Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, second holding company from the top, to pay dividends on its capital stock or $557,000 interest on a note held by the parent company.

Chairman Jerome Frank of the SEC and Commissioner Robert E. Healy said the dividends would have been paid out of the corporation's capital. Since this is contrary to the 1935 holding company act, they declared, the commission felt that it had no discretion except to deny the request.

Petition Follows Ruling

A few hours after the commission issued its ruling, Associated Gas & Electric Co. filed in the Federal Court of the Northern District of New York at Utica a petition for reorganization under the Chandler bankruptcy act.

Roger J. Whiteford, Washington attorney who became president of the company last month, revealed that the corporation would file a similar petition.

By placing both companies under reorganization, it is pointed out, emergence of a single new holding company with a simplified capital structure becomes a possibility.

The court proceedings signal the beginning of a new era for one of the largest and most complex public utility organizations the country has known. They may mark the end of domination of the 64 operating companies in the system by the Howard C. Hopson interests.

Can't Meet Interest

Whiteford, in a statement last night, said that, as a result of the commission's ruling on dividends, it would be impossible for Associated Gas & Electric Co. to meet interest on its debentures due January

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME

TAX FUGITIVES: Talking of taxes—and that's the big topic on Capitol Hill this week—the President had a crisp comment on the subject from his mother not long ago.

Harlan Miller

A neighbor who owns a big place on the Hudson near Hyde Park was visiting the Roosevelts.

They were discussing their houses and the visiting dowager turned to FDR: "We have one thing in common, Mr. President," she said. "We both have large houses in which our children aren't interested."

They all shook their heads dolefully over the phenomenon of young people uninterested in their ancestral manors. Then Mrs. James Roosevelt spoke up.

"Franklin," she said, "I think perhaps taxes have something to do with this!"

So the story goes.

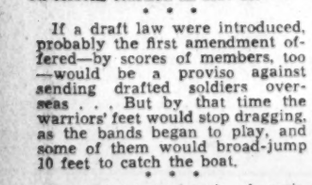
For Government clerks here, near the center of the noble schemes for furnishing homes elsewhere at $4 per room per month for the underprivileged, there's a sardonic note in the fact that those who earn under $2,000 a year often have to pay one-third of their incomes to house their families here, and none too lavishly, either.

* * * *

WAR TALK? Some GOP leaders are inclined to turn the spotlight on the phrase "military participation" which the President used in his speech to Congress. They think his reiterated pledge against "military participation" means he contemplates non-military participation.



"—when the war talk got vivid"

Some Republicans feel they got their fingers burned last session trying to make Roosevelt seem more warlike than he is. But others, impressed by a poll on the subject, still think "keep out of war" is the best Republican issue for 1940.

When the war talk got so vivid during the special session which repealed the arms embargo, the impression got around that there is a draft law already on the books, ready to yank unwilling patriots into uniform.

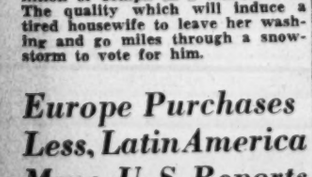
There were so many speeches made and articles printed on the general theme "Uncle Sam has your number and your gun ready for you" that some of the reluctant cannon-fodder began last fall to look for crutches and bandages, immunity and exemption.



"—their reluctance would vanish"

Actually, of course, there is no draft law in existence. There isn't even one pending on the Hill. In various drawers at the War Dept. are various tentative versions of such a bill, and a lot of data based on lessons learned in 1917-18.

If a draft law were introduced, probably the first amendment offered—by scores of members, too—would be a proviso against sending drafted soldiers overseas . . . But by that time the warriors' feet would stop dragging, as the bands began to play, and some of them would broad-jump 10 feet to catch the boat.

One of Washington's champion straphangers, who hasn't had a seat on a street car since 1937, told the conductor the other evening that he was riding past his usual stop, clear to the end of the line.

"I want to see," he said, "how it feels to sit down on one of those luxurious seats."

Europe Purchases Less, Latin America More, U. S. Reports

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that in the third month of the European war United States merchandise exports increased in Canada, Latin America and Asia, counteracting a decline of some $6,000,000 in shipments to Europe, which totaled $104,399,000.

The department said that in November, Canada bought $51,262,000 worth of goods from the United States, compared with $38,517,000 in November, 1938. The month's exports to Mexico and other Latin portions of North America increased from $5,239,000 to $8,700,000. Exports to South America jumped from $23,310,000 to $38,986,000. Asiatic exports increased from $41,577,000 to $53,365,000.

Protests Filed On Murphy's Appointment

Ellender Charges 'Persecution' in Louisiana Inquiry

By the Associated Press

A number of protests against the appointment of Attorney General Frank Murphy to the Supreme Court have been filed with the Senate Judiciary Committee, Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, said yesterday.

Burke, chairman of a subcommittee named to consider the Murphy appointment, said he would call this group together this morning to go over the protests. He added that if there was "any substance" to them the committee probably would hold a hearing.

Most Senators predicted prompt confirmation for Murphy. They recalled that the red-haired former Michigan Governor won Senate confirmation as Attorney General by a 78-to-7 vote last year.

Ellender Objects

A telegram from Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, was among messages received by the committee relating to Murphy's appointment to succeed the late Pierce Butler.

The Louisiana Senator said he was sending the Judiciary subcommittee a number of newspaper clippings about Louisiana State affairs, and added:

"I do not want to believe that the head of the Justice Department is aware of how his assistants are misusing their sacred trust.

"These tactics are nothing short of persecution and are intended to intimidate the citizens of a sovereign State."

Three other Senate committees recommended prompt confirmation of numerous other nominations recently submitted by Mr. Roosevelt.

Committee Approves Edison

Charles Edison's appointment as Secretary of the Navy was approved by the Naval Affairs Committee.

The Finance Committee approved Daniel W. Bell to be Undersecretary of the Treasury and John L. Sullivan to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

The Foreign Relations Committee approved the following nominations:

James H. R. Cromwell, Minister to Canada; Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State; George Messersmith, Ambassador to Cuba; John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium; R. Henry Norweb, Minister to Peru; Robert M. Scotten, Minister to the Dominican Republic, and Clarence E. Gauss, Minister to Australia.

Second Group Of Churchmen Sees President

President Roosevelt yesterday discussed prospects for peace with representatives of the Quakers, Dunkards and Mennonites.

It was the second church group to call at the White House this week. Clarence E. Pickett, of Philadelphia, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, said the group favored the United States "taking the lead in a peace move."

Mr. Roosevelt, Pickett said, was not specific in his ideas as to peace prospects or objectives. After a conference Tuesday with a group representing the Lutheran, Baptist and Seventh-Day Adventist churches, the President revealed that his views as to peace had begun to crystallize into ideals and objectives, but they should not, he said, be reduced to factual language at this time.

Approve Vatican Tieup

Pickett, who introduced members of the group to the President, explained that they were the three "historic peace churches." Unlike the Lutheran, Baptist and Seventh-Day Adventist group, they had no objection, he said, to the President's appointment of Myron C. Taylor as his personal emissary to the Vatican to work for peace.

"In fact, I heartily approve of it," Pickett declared.

He said members of the group conveyed to the President certain proposals for relief work which their organizations were willing to carry out in case the United States becomes involved in the war. The group asked for the interview with the President, he declared.

Members of the Group

Besides Pickett, those attending were P. C. Hebert, Sterling, Kans.; H. C. Harshbarger, Newton, Kans., and Harold Bender, Goshen, Ind., representing the Mennonites; Rufus Bowman, Chicago, and Paul Bowman, Bridgewater, Va., representing the Church of the Brethren, or Dunkards; and Rufus M. Jones, Haverford, Pa., and Walter C. Woodward, Richmond, Ind., representing the Society of Friends, or Quakers.

McEntee Leads Candidates for CCC Headship

James J. McEntee, assistant director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, was mentioned prominently yesterday as the next head of the organization, succeeding Robert Fechner, who died December 31. A nomination is expected from the White House this week.

Although McEntee was said by some to have the "inside track" and a "3-to-1" chance, Edward F. McGrady, vice president of the Radio Corporation of America and former Assistant Secretary of Labor, was also said to have strong support.

Congressional sources, where McEntee is the favored candidate, said that Federal Security Administrator McNutt had recommended McEntee.

Another mentioned for the post was Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior. It was reported that Labor Secretary Perkins had recommended W. Frank Persons, former director of the United States Employment Service and recently in charge of selection of CCC enrollees.

NLRB Hired 'Incompetent' But 'Pro-CIO' Man, Inquiry Told

Examiner Reported Applicant Was 'Of Low Intellect,' She Recalls; Fired After Dismissing Two Cases

By John B. Oakes

An applicant for a position with the NLRB obtained the job although a board official had quoted him as admitting he was "pro-C. I. O.," the Smith Committee learned yesterday.

Evidence presented to the committee disclosed that Eugene P. Lacy, in whom Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, was interested, became trial examiner for the board shortly after Beatrice M. Stern, assistant secretary of the NLRB, had written a memo stating:

"Believe he is very limited in viewpoint, intellect . . . Is all for the New Deal . . . He is anti-Rankin and anti-Harrison. When asked, he said, with a gulp, that 'he is pro-C. I. O.' . . . He will not make a trial examiner."

Board officials said Lacy's appointment was not made permanent after his "probation period" and he is no longer with the NLRB.

As trial examiner in the Godchaux Sugars, Inc., case in 1937-38, Lacy excluded from the record certain evidence which the board subsequently held was relevant, the committee was told. Ultimately, the NLRB dismissed the case, which involved an A. F. of L. union.

Second Case Dropped

In another case, Toland brought out, the board asked its regional director for information on testimony that the trial examiner had excluded from the record. This case, involving the Talladega Cotton Factory and a C. I. O. union, was also dismissed.

On the stand during discussion of both cases was Mrs. Abe Fortas, who testified that she had become a review attorney for the board shortly before her admission to the bar in March, 1938. A graduate of Barnard, Wisconsin, and Yale Law School, Mrs. Fortas is the wife of the general counsel for the bituminous coal division of the Interior Department.

Dissatisfaction of the board with the work of Lacy, who comes from Tupelo, Miss., was indicated in a memorandum initialed "G. O. P." (George O. Pratt, chief trial examiner), who quoted Charles Logan, New Orleans regional director, as saying Lacy was "so inept and foolish that he tried to stay at the respondent's 'guest house.'"

The memorandum went on to say that "this incident, coupled with the fact that Lacy's reports (on the Godchaux case) were not too hot, was the basis for a determination not to use him further. Then Senator Bilbo got after me. I told the Senator of the above incident (a mistake) and now he has handed me this document."

Neither the "document" nor other correspondence relevant to Bilbo's interest in Lacy was permitted by the committee to be placed in the record.

In October, 1938, with the Godchaux case still undecided, Chairman Madden received a stinging letter from Leo B. Carter, A. F. of L. organizer in New Orleans, who said that the Godchaux matter was "apparently suffering the usual indifference on the part of your board to cases involving the A. F. of L."

On the other hand, Carter charged, the Board holds investigations and elections "when we have closed shop contracts, merely on petition by the communistically controlled C. I. O." Carter asserted that "we not only have to fight unscrupulous, chiseling employers but the NLRB itself."

Rely on Examiners

Mrs. Fortas was preceded on the stand by Mrs. Margaret Bennett Porter, and followed by Miss Fanny M. Boyls, both NLRB review attorneys here. Mrs. Porter, who continued her testimony of Tuesday, was asked by Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, if "in practical operation you, in large measure, determine what the decision in the case shall be?"

"To the extent that the board relies on my digesting of the facts, that is true," she replied. The witness said that "someone has to" when asked if review attorneys have to "determine credibility of witnesses."

Under questioning of Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, Mrs. Porter said she thought it "necessary" for the board to delegate to subordinate persons the task of summarizing the lengthy transcripts of evidence.

NLRB Counsel Charles Fahy told reporters yesterday that "it hardly seems proper" for the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in its Tuesday decision on the Inland Steel case to have referred to the board as an "executioner." In the decision, which overturned the board's ruling that Inland must put an agreement with the C. I. O. in writing, the court had mentioned "the danger of imposing upon a single agency the multiple duties of prosecutor, judge, jury and executioner."

Roosevelt Nominates David Lewis For Another Term on Mediation Board

The Senate yesterday received from President Roosevelt the nomination of David J. Lewis, former Maryland Democratic Representative, for reappointment to the National Mediation Board for a term expiring February 1, 1945.

D. J. LEWIS

Lewis was named to the board last year for a one-year term after his unsuccessful Administration-backed race against Senator Tydings in the Democratic primary.

Entrance requirements to West Point are strict, but, as printed by the Federal Register yesterday, they aren't so particular about spelling.

There is one paragraph laying down the law on declension, conjugation, comparison, etc. It is headed:

"English grammer."

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced legislation to extend until February 1, 1944, the time in which individuals holding directorships in more than one national bank must relinquish multiple positions.

Congress last session passed a bill extending the period until February 1, 1941, but President Roosevelt vetoed it.

When President Roosevelt vetoed a pension bill last August he could not have realized the chain of events that would follow.

After the veto Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, wrote to a daughter of a Civil War veteran in a small Wisconsin community, advising her that she would not receive certain benefits.

She informed the Senator yesterday: "I was so upset that I fell down and broke my big toe."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, a member of the Senate Commerce Committee, introduced legislation to prohibit the Maritime Commission from transferring Government-owned or leased vessels to foreign registry. Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri introduced the bill for Clark.

Hull to Plead Trade Treaties To House Unit

Secretary to Talk Today to Committee On Ways and Means

The case for extension of the reciprocal trade agreement act, the President's lone legislative request to this session of Congress, will be laid before the House Ways and Means Committee today by Secretary of State Hull.

Hull, with full White House backing, will be the committee's first witness for three-year extension of the law which expires June 12.

Chairman Doughton hopes to bring out a favorable Ways and Means report for the bill some time next week, and to win swift right-of-way from the House Rules Committee.

10 Republicans Opposed

With the ten Republican committee members solidly against extension, the vote is expected to be close, but leaders claimed a safe margin of Democratic votes for the bill.

Meantime a resolution opposing extension of the act "in its present form" was forwarded to Chairman Doughton by Howard I. Young, chairman of the tariff committee of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The resolution, adopted by the 1939 annual Congress of American Industry, indorsed the "basic theory of reciprocal trade agreements between nations," but maintained they should be made bilateral, based on the findings of a "nonpartisan scientific fact-finding committee" and made subject to Senate approval.

Stockmen Send Wire

On the eve of the national convention of the American National Livestock Association in Denver, Secretary Hull received a wire from F. E. Mollin, secretary of the association, declaring stockmen "generally delighted" with termination of Argentine trade negotiations. Mollin said breakdown of negotiations with Argentina, involving canned beef imports, was a boon to Western stock growers.

Leaving Washington to address the livestock association Friday, Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, said he would ask the group to oppose extension of the trade agreements act unless provision was made for Senate ratification of each compact.

The Congress of American Industry resolution sent to Doughton yesterday declared "further expansion of the present program would not be in the interest of agriculture, industry and labor"

"Conditions in international trade are so chaotic at present that it is recommended that the National Association of Manufacturers oppose negotiation of further trade agreements, including the revision of old agreements," it read.

"The National Association of Manufacturers also recommends that when the reciprocal trade agreements act expires in June, 1940, its further extension in its present form should be vigorously opposed."

Fight for Independent FCA Forecast by 3 Farm Groups

Three national farm associations yesterday forecast a Congressional fight this session to remove the Farm Credit Administration from the Department of Agriculture and restore its independent status. At the same time, however, Agriculture Secretary Wallace established his direct control over the organization.

Wallace yesterday issued an order making the FCA's new governor, A. G. Black, directly responsible to him, thus completing a cycle of events which began last summer with the FCA's transfer to Agriculture and continued through the resignation recently of Gov. F. F. Hill and the appointment of Black, a former department official, as his successor.

Executive bodies of two of the farm organizations have been meeting here this week. Before adjournment they are expected to recommend Congressional action to restore FCA's independence.

One of the groups, the American Farm Bureau, has a tentative appointment with President Roosevelt today, at which time, it was reported, it may ask that the FCA be cut loose from the department and placed under the control of a bipartisan board. Bureau officials, however, declined to discuss their recommendation in advance of its presentation, and would neither confirm nor deny the report.

Miller Wants FCA Freed

The executive committee of the National Cooperative Council, however, listened yesterday with approval to a speech of its president, John D. Miller, demanding that legislation be carried through to undo those provisions of the reorganization act that involved the FCA transfer.

Pointing out that he spoke in advance of the formulation of resolutions and expressed only his personal ideas, Miller demanded that the FCA again be made responsible only to the President and Congress.

"In a large department like that of our Department of Agriculture," Miller said, "there always exist currents and cross-currents of opinion, conflict and duplication of efforts, while there is an ever-present temptation to subordinate the work of some and to emphasize that of other agencies; in other words, there is always danger of departmental politics.

"FCA, now partly owned by farmers, should not be imperiled by continuing to be one of the many agencies in such department."

Grange Committee to Meet

It was anticipated that the cooperative council would pass resolutions today or tomorrow supporting this position.

The National Grange, whose executive committee will meet here next week, undoubtedly will urge legislation to the same purpose, according to its Washington representative, Fred Brenckman, now making ready for the gathering.

He said the Grange was unalterably opposed to the transfer and would not drop its fight.

Besides his order making Black responsible to him, Wallace issued a communication to FCA officials instructing them to find ways of re-establishing delinquent borrowers on a "sound basis" that would "maintain the integrity" of the Federal Land Bank system.

Former Gov. Hill had suspended foreclosures on delinquent mortgages last fall. Wallace said he indorsed the action but did not believe "we should stop at that."

He added that the delinquencies "have resulted in the impairment of stock in a large number of the national farm loan associations through which farmers secure Land Bank loans.

G. O. P. to Set Convention Date Feb. 16

Some Republicans Favor National Session Following Democrats

Republican Chairman John Hamilton yesterday summoned the G. O. P. national committee to meet here February 16 to set a time and place for the party's Presidential convention.

Since Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley has called his committee to convene here February 5, to make arrangements for the Democratic national convention, observers saw in the decision to have the Republicans meet 11 days later an effort to profit by what the Democrats do.

There has been considerable sentiment among Republicans to hold their convention after the Democrats meet, instead of before as has been customary for many years.

There is considerable agitation for both conventions to be held in Chicago in July. Some prominent Democrats have forecast that the Democratic convention would be held in Chicago the middle of July.

Figuring on that development some Republican chieftains advocated holding their convention the last week in that mnoth.

"With our national committee meeting February 16," said G. O. P. House Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, "the Republicans will have an opportunity to set a convention date later than the Democratic convention. But if the Democrats choose a late date in July, we can't possibly fall for that. Then we will meet before the Democrats. After all, we must have a real campaign this year."

Desire of some Republicans to meet last is due in part to uncertainty over whether President Roosevelt will seek a third term.

Under the rules of the Republican National Convention, four months notice of the date must be given, but with the committee likely to conclude its work on February 16 or 17, a June date would be permissible if the leaders found it inadvisable to try to out-wait the Democrats.

Bioff Indicted On Tax Charge In California

Film Labor Leader Accused of Evasion By U. S. Grand Jury

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—A Federal grand jury today indicted William Bioff, 41, on an income tax evasion charge. Bioff is spokesman for most of the movies' organized labor groups.

The indictment charged Bioff reported an income of $5,720 in 1936 on which he paid a tax of $105.92, but that his actual income that year was $33,753.25 on which a tax of $4,384.93 should have been paid; and that in 1937, his income was actually $176,416.38 on which a tax of $80,250.49 should have been paid, but that he reported only $7,205 and paid a tax of $193.08.

The information on which the indictment was based was presented by Charles H. Carr, special assistant to the Attorney General, who has been investigating behind-the-scenes motion picture activities since last August.

Bioff's attorneys said he would surrender at 10 a. m. tomorrow. They said that while they had not seen a copy of the indictment, "we assume that it involves the matters which were investigated several years ago by the Sacramento (California) County grand jury, by the legislative interim committee on capital and labor and for the last several weeks by the local Federal grand jury.

". . . Mr. Bioff's complete innocence of any possible charge will be definitely established in due course."

Bioff told a California legislative interim committee that his salary, as representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, was $110 a week and $12 a day for expenses.

During a National Labor Relations Board hearing, involving an inter-union fight, a minority I. A. T. S. E. group charged Bioff had been paid $100,000 by Producer Joseph Schenck as a bribe. This was denied by both Schenck and Bioff, who explained that $100,000 was exchanged in a business deal. Carr indicated, when he started his work here, that he would look into the $100,000 matter. No mention of this was made in the indictment.

Johnson Happy As His Men Hail Union Defeat

By the Associated Press

Johnson City, N. Y., Jan. 10.—An 82-year-old man smiled from his sickbed tonight as most of his 15,000 employes and their families danced, paraded and otherwise celebrated a 5-to-1 defeat of a proposal for company unionization.

The ailing industrialist is George F. Johnson, who began work as an $18-a-week shoemaker and now is chairman of the $36,000,000 Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corporation, a pioneer in employe profit-sharing.

Tonight's celebration, which began this morning when workers learned Endicott-Johnson employes, in a National Labor Relations Board poll, had overwhelmingly decided against any type of unionization, developed rapidly. Benches were abandoned and plants closed.

Two years of organization, by both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., was climaxed by the balloting. A formal announcement gave 1,612 votes for the A. F. of L., 1,079 for the C. I. O. and 12,693 against both.

Charles F. Johnson, jr., vice president and general manager of the company, which operates about 20 plants, announced the vote proved policies of the company were "sound."

C. I. O. and A. F. of L. organizers declined comment. Previously they announced a protest was being considered because of an antiunion demonstration Monday by an estimated 8,000 persons. Last Friday William Green, A. F. of L. president, came to Johnson City and voiced a personal plea for support of his union.

Monday's demonstration was mild compared to today's. An estimated 2,500 persons paraded to the Johnson's home in Endicott, but dispersed quietly when told the noise might bother their employer, recovering from pneumonia. Endicott public schools closed because of lack of attendance.

Film Union Chief Indicted on Tax Fraud Charges

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP).—William Bioff, organizer and leader of unions in the film industry, today was indicted by the Federal grand jury on charges of income tax fraud.

The Government charged that Bioff, head of the powerful A. F. L. Conference of Studio Unions and representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, reported an income of $5,720 in 1936, whereas his actual income was $33,573.

In 1937, the indictment further charged, his income was actually $176,416, but Bioff reported an income of only $7,205.

The maximum penalty is $10,000 fine or 5 years' imprisonment, or both.

Legislature Meets, Passes 1 Bill in Virginia

Measure Authorizes Tunnel Easements In Williamsburg

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10.—Virginia legislators organized the biennial session of the General Assembly today, passed one bill and heard Gov. Price delivere his midterm message calling for larger public school appropriations and a merit-system reduction in unemployment compensation taxes.

Both houses confirmed all the Democratic caucus nominees and completed the organization formalities with time to spare before the prearranged hour arrived for the Governor to address the joint Assembly.

The Senate reelected 90-year-old Senator Henry T. Wickham of Hanover as its president pro tem, and named E. R. Combs, former State comptroller and leader in the State Democratic organization headed by United States Senator Harry F. Byrd, as its clerk to succeed the late O. Victor Hanger of Amherst. John R. Jeter, Hanger's assistant for many years, who was appointed clerk by Gov. Price so that the Senate might have a constitutional officer to convene it, called the chamber to order.

Lieut. Gov. Saxon W. Holt, the Senate's presiding officer, is ill in a Richmond hospital, and Senator Wickham took the chair in his absence. A. B. Davies of Clifton Forge was reelected the sergeant at arms.

The lone bill introduced on the opening day became law before the Senate adjourned at 3:17 p. m., until noon tomorrow. It was a measure offered by Speaker Dovell to authorize the city of Williamsburg to grant easements to the Federal Government for construction of an 1,183-foot tunnel under the city as a connecting link in the Colonial Parkway, running between Yorktown and Jamestown.

The bill, printed as "House bill No. 1," and distributed to members' desks before the session opened, carried an emergency clause, and with the consent first of the House and then of the Senate, constitutional readings were dispensed with and the bill placed on its passage. It received all "ayes" in both Houses.

Dovell said the measure was necessary for ratification of an agreement already executed between the city and the National Park Service in connection with the proposed project.

Judge Throws Out $5,000 Topping Suit

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—A Federal judge today threw out of court a suit filed by a private detective to collect a $5,000 bonus he said Herny J. Topping, tinplate heir, owed him for obtaining divorce evidence against Topping's first wife.

Hoover Reveals Theft of Army Bomber Plans

Culprit Convicted; FBI Gets 214 Spy Complaints a Day

By International News Service

Theft of plans for an Army bomber from the Douglas aircraft plant at Santa Monica, Calif., and their recovery by G-men was disclosed yesterday by Federal Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Testimony of Hoover before a House Appropriations sub-committee, just made public, referred to the case of Edward William McDonald, who early in December was convicted in a Federal court in California for the theft of the plans and sentenced to six months in prison.

Hoover urged the committee to approve President Roosevelt's request for $1,475,000 for 155 additional agents to assist the FBI in combating sabotage and espionage.

The G-Man chief told the committee he had organized a general intelligence to deal with national defense matters, which worked on a 24-hour basis. He disclosed that complaints of espionage and sabotage had risen from 250 in all of 1938 to 214 a day, or at the rate of 78,000 a year.

At the request of the War Department, Hoover said, the FBI made a study to determine whether 430 factories, vital to the national defense, has sufficient plant protection against sabotage.

"I have been very much surprised at the absolute lack of protective measures in many of our great industrial plans," Hoover said.

Systems to protect the Douglas and other plants have been set up, Hoover said.

Power Failure Blacks Out Arlington, Fairfax and Loudoun

Virginians in a large section of the State, including Arlington, Fairfax and Loudoun counties, experienced a "black out" last night as a mystery power line break hit the Virginia Public Service Co.

In addition to nearby towns and communities, power was cut in Fredericksburg, Danville, Ashland and parts of Richmond.

Sections of this area had their electricity after two or three hours of "lights out." Other regions, including part of Arlington County and most of Fairfax and Loudoun counties were still "dark" at midnight.

With its electrical current cut off, and the town in darkness, Leesburg was forced to use its old town hall fire bell to warn citizens of a fire that gutted the Loudoun News Building and caused $3,000 damage in the Littlejohn drug store next door.

More than 600 patrons in the Buckingham Theater in Arlington were given "blackout" checks when the lights went out in the middle of a picture.

The current failure caught thousands as they prepared their evening meals. Lack of power not only shut off lights, it affected stoves and water pumps.

The Post received scores of telephone calls from perplexed Virginians, saying:

"The stove won't work. What shall I do about supper?" and "The current on the pump is shut off, and I haven't a drop of water for the baby's formula."

Fire in the Loudoun News Building broke out in the rear of the weekly's plant about 7 p. m., shortly after the town went completely dark. An alarm was called in, but in the absence of electricity the Leesburg Volunteer Fire Company was unable to sound the electric siren. A volunteer rushed to Town Hall and pulled the rope of the old fire bell that has rested unused since most residents can remember.

Text of Stimson Letter Urging U. S. Ban Sale of War Goods to Japan

China Trade, Treaty Links Are Cited

Former Secretary Emphasizes Duty And Self-Protection

Following is the text of the letter of Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War and, later, Secretary of State, recommending legislation to prohibit the export of arms, munitions and raw war materials:

In the problems presented to them by the present chaotic conditions of the European world, the Government and people of the United States have taken successfully their first step toward an affirmative foreign policy. They have repealed the automatic arms embargo which made them, in effect, an unwilling ally of those nations of whose international conduct they disapproved. They have returned to the policy of their fathers, who believed that peace-loving nations when they were unjustly threatened or attacked should be allowed to defend themselves with arms purchased in neutral markets.

Our people have thus shown that they were not afraid to discriminate between right and wrong. They have recognized that there is a difference between official neutrality and moral blindness.

"Good Has Followed"

And so far there have followed no evil results of this action, but on the contrary, much good. The nations which are standing for the kind of international conduct in which we believe have been greatly encouraged, and we ourselves have shown no sign of losing our heads in wild adventures. There has been no uncontrollable war boom, and the American public is studying deeply and trying carefully to appraise the difficult problems by which we are confronted.

Now we are approaching another national problem brought about by war—this time on the opposite side of the world, in Asia. For three years the great resources of our country to a major degree have been thrown continuously to the aid of wrong-doing in the Far East. They have been used not only to assist unprovoked aggression against China but also to facilitate acts of inexcusable cruelty toward unoffending Chinese civilians, women and children. They have been used to promote the violation of treaties which we initiated and which represent the hope of modern civilization in the Far East. They have been used to destroy the humanitarian work carried on in China by American churches, missionaries and educators. The evil which we have assisted in China has been much more widespread and brutal than anything which has yet happened in Europe, but American responsibility in dealing with it is somewhat different.

Individuals Are Blamed

It is not our national legislation which is at fault, but a comparatively small number of individual Americans who are directly responsible—chiefly the merchants who are selling to Japan the ore, steel and scrap iron indispensable for her bombs, and the large oil producers who are selling to her the even more indisable aviation gasoline for her planes. Today that responsibility has become more clear than ever. The resources of the very few other nations who formerly joined with us in that traffic are now nearly all absorbed in the European war. Except in America there are very few of these indispensable materials for aggression which are now left available to Japan. The focus for responsibility is thus almost wholly fastened upon us. The figures of the sordid traffic have been published and republished many times and there is no need for repeating them here. If a prophet Nathan were abroad in the world today, his finger would point unerringly at Uncle Sam and there would be no doubt in his decision, "Thou Art the Man."

And yet as to the American people as a whole that would be an unjust condemnation. Both the press and the Gallup Polls overwhelmingly show that there is no international question on which our people are more thoroughly united than as to the Japanese aggression against China. From the beginning they have accurately appraised the Far Eastern issue and from the beginning their decision has been overwhelmingly against Japan—against her on the original aggression and even more against her on the brutality with which that aggression has been carried out. More than four-fifths of those who have expressed their opinion in a recent Gallup Poll are in favor of stopping the evil with an embargo.

The real responsibility therefore rests first upon the comparatively small group of Americans who have been willing to soil their hands with this dirty traffic; and secondly, upon those political leaders who have tried to frighten our government from doing anything to prevent the wrong by warning them that to do so would surely lead them into war with Japan.

Fear Unfounded

Experienced observers have promptly recognized and publicly stated that such a fear was without credible foundation; that the very last thing which the Japanese government desires is a war with the United States; and that on the contrary every act and word of our Government in respect to the Orient is followed with most anxious solicitude in Japan. Admiral Yarnell in a discussion in the New York Town Hall Radio Forum was one of the most recent of such observers and certainly his authority is outstanding.

But the clearest demonstration came when our Government after a long period of forebearance with repeated violations of our own rights in China took sudden and vigorous action and on July 26 last denounced the Japanese-American commercial treaty of 1911, to become effective six months from that date. This was followed on October 19 by an extraordinary public address by our Ambassador to Japan expressly warning the Japanese people "that American public opinion strongly resents some of the things that Japan's armed forces are doing in China today"—also that this public opinion "is unanimous."

Did Japan bluster and threaten war after these abrupt and very direct warnings from our Government? She did not. She at once put the brakes on the long series of aggressive acts of her agents against Americans in China. She promised to reopen the lower Yangtze River. She uttered other conciliatory statements. Some of her statements indicated a complete misconception as to the character and cause of our resentment but they were certainly not warlike.

Characteristic Diplomacy

And ever since there has been going on in this country a concerted movement, very evidently originating in Tokyo, composed of suggestions and requests addressed to chambers of commerce, members of Congress, and other prominent persons urging that pressure be brought to bear on our Executive to hasten into negotiation for a new commercial treaty with Japan.

We are also being urged from quarters usually quite easily traceable to Japanese sources not to lose the present "golden opportunity" to offer our good offices toward bringing the hostilities in China to an end. In short a course has been followed which can be at once recognized as characteristic of Japan's diplomacy ever since, under the leadership of her military leaders, she embarked on her conquest of Manchuria.

Those leaders desire strongly to subjugate China, but they also clearly recognize that a head-on quarrel with us would be fatal to that project. As a result there follows a suggestion for our mediation, they knowing full well that nothing undesired by Japan can come out of such a proposal, while in the meanwhile any action by our government to stop our traffic in arms with her will be effectively forestalled.

Free Hand After January 26

On January 26 next the six months' notice given by our Government of the abrogation of the treaty with Japan will have expired. Our Government will then be morally free to act with respect to our commerce with that country. It is therefore important that our people should consider and discuss the matter thoroughly and in its broadest aspects so that our Government may act in the light and with the support of an intelligent public opinion.

In the first place, our interests in the Far East are not limited to the narrow interests of our present commerce in that region. They are broader and more permanent. We are the largest nation bordering on the eastern side of the Pacific Ocean. We are increasingly concerned with what happens on the other side. In the past we have not hesitated to recognize the responsibility which that position involved. We have been active and potent in spreading the influence of our civilization and a moral and cultural force among our neighbors on the opposite shore of that ocean. Not only have American missionaries and educators been more influential than those of any other nation in attempts to spread there the peaceful influence of our American principles and mode of life, but in the Philippines for over 40 years we have been building up a very successful demonstration of self-government among some 15,000,000 Filipino people.

Our purposes in doing this have not been chimerical or fantastic. They have represented the long-range interests of our country. It has been clear to us that among these interests was the continuance of the stability and independence of the naturally peaceful culture of the Chinese nation.

3 Nations Necessary

If for no other reason we foresaw that in the future development of that culture there rested stable relations and great possibilities of fruitful commerce with us. Today anyone who thinks can see that it is for our interest that there should continue to exist in eastern Asia three independent and stable nations, Japan, Russia and China, rather than that one or two of these nations should successfully conquer and dominate the third.

Furthermore, when we examine their history during the past 50 years, we do not believe that the Japanese are capable of establishing in China a regime of peace, possessing the characteristics of security, law, justice, order, and stability. In their conquest of Korea, their subsequent 21 demands upon China, and their still later invasion of Manchuria, we recognize that the Japanese have been heavy contributors to the conditions of disorder which have sometimes developed and prevailed in the Chinese nation; and, last of all, during the past three years we can easily see that the methods of the Japanese army in China have produced on the part of China's four hundred million people a prevailing suspicion, fear, and outright hostility, such that even if Japan were able to occupy forcibly all of China, the relationship between the Japanese in China and the Chinese population would be characterized by constant resort to force and manifestations of violence.

Japanese Army Flayed

Furthermore, we recognize that the immediate responsibility for this rests upon the Japanese army, which during the past ten years has succeeded in obtaining a domination over the civil authorities of Japan to an extent which is contrary to all the democratic principles which we believe in as the best security for a stable national or international policy.

For these reasons we have a strong feeling that it is highly desirable in the interests of the United States that the Japanese military organization should become discredited in the eyes of the Japanese people. We know that the Japanese people are highly patriotic and that until they themselves become convinced that their army has embarked on a venture which is a failure and which also has brought severe burdens and hardships upon the Japanese people, it will be unlikely that the people will cease to support it.

I think that in the foregoing I have stated briefly what are the current views of an overwhelming majority of the American people who have at all considered what is going on in the Far East.

Prospects of Success

Now what are the natural deduction from such views and beliefs? In the first place, what light does it shed upon the position we should take toward the organized movement that Japan is evidently making in this country today suggesting that our Government should mediate with a view to stopping hostilities in China? What prospect is there that our efforts would result in any kind of a peace which would be in accordance with the historic interests and aims of our country in that region?

Is there any likelihood that Japan would accept a peace of such a character that any high-minded or patriotic American could take satisfaction in it? Is there any likelihood that China would willingly accept the only kind of peace which the Japanese army would be willing to consent to? Should this country lend its influence toward imposing on China a peace which disrupted her territory or destroyed her independence or made her economically or militarily a vassal of Japan?

I cannot but believe that the unhesitating answer—the almost unanimous answer—by all such Americans to these questions would be in the negative. I do not claim knowledge of the military situation in China other than what is in the possession of any interested and careful reader of the daily press; but, from such observations as I have been able to make I am convinced that the recent developments in China have given the Chinese government renewed confidence in the capacity of China to resist and that China has no intention of making peace on the basis of Japanese terms as constantly outlined by her spokesmen.

Japan Bogging Down

On the contrary, I have the strong impression that it is Japan whose efforts are beginning to "bog down," and these impressions are confirmed by the hurried efforts which the Japanese military authorities have been making to establish in Nanking a Chinese puppet government and to proclaim it as having the support of the Chinese people—a fact which any observer can see is to a very high degree untrue.

So, in short, I see no reason why our Government should now offer its efforts to force a peace upon China. I believe that to do so would fail to bring any enduring peace; that it would seriously discredit the United States to have abandoned the principles toward China and the Far East which for nearly half a century it has maintained; and that it would seriously impair our future interest in that entire region. I believe further that it would merely tend to assist Japan in acquiring a legal title to some portion of China that the Japanese army has seized by force.

Consider what the effect of such an action on our part would have upon our moral influence toward peace in other portions of the world where war is raging. To one who has learned to value the influence of this country in foreign affairs as one of the noblest and highest influences in a broken world, such a prospect would seem lamentable indeed.

Lines of Action

No. Such steps as we take should be in the other direction. They should be toward supporting and effectuating our principles and objectives in the Far East rather than of abandoning them. Holding that aim in view, the course of action easiest and most practicable for the United States would be to discontinue the assistance which some of our people are now rendering to the efforts of the Japanese to destroy the independent sovereignty of China. Without going into detail, there are several lines along which our Government could act.

One step it could take today and that step is in line with what it has already done. It could address its powerful leadership and influence toward persuading those Americans who are now engaged in exporting iron ore and scrap iron as well as aeronautical gasoline to Japan to cease their exportations. The Secretary of State has already successfully applied this method of a so-called "moral embargo" toward preventing further exports to Japan of airplanes and of machinery for the manufacture of the special kind of gasoline necessary to fly airplanes.

It is hard to see why we should stop with those efforts and not go on and try to stop the export of the special gasoline itself. The stoppage of the machinery for manufacturing that gasoline is of little present avail so long as we permit the export of the product itself. The readiness of our merchants of airplanes in the past to accept such leadership of our State Department should encourage it in the belief that it would have the support of our oil and scrap merchants in further efforts.

Must Go Further

Compliance with such a request by our Government would be worthwhile as an immediate step in the line of restoring our own self-respect. And it might well be an effective step. But it could hardly be more than a step. In the light of the violence which Japan during the past few years has done to the principles advocated by this country as well as to our material interests in Asia, such a step can hardly be thought adequate. In order to impress Japan with the seriousness of the feeling of our people as to this matter, I think our Government will probably have to go further.

There are at least four bills now pending in Congress proposing directly to prohibit the export by us to Japan of arms, munitions and the raw materials out of which arms are made. One of these bills bases its proposed action specifically upon the reason that the arms and materials thus prohibited are intended to be used in violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of a nation whose sovereignty and integrity the United States is obligated by treaty to respect.

The passage of such legislation would have the great advantage of demonstrating more clearly than any other method the reason for our action and the emphasis which we place upon right conduct in international relations and particularly upon the treaty for which we are mainly responsible, undertaking to respect the integrity and independence of China.

Conduct Must Change

Furthermore, the fact that our Congress, representing our entire people had taken such action would carry with it a weight of influence which would be far more effective in impressing the people of Japan with the sincerity of our purpose than any other action. The stable equilibrium of eastern Asia, in which the United States is so deeply interested and which is now menaced by Japan's attack upon China, cannot be restored without a complete reversal of the conduct followed for several years by the leaders of the Japanese army. And among the influences which would be effective in ultimately accomplishing that reversal next to the courageous and stubborn resistance of the Chinese nation would be the knowledge in Japan that the United States through the action of its representative Congress had deliberately and clearly taken such a weighty step to evince its disapproval.

Indeed, the influence of such action by our Government would transcend even the great crisis in Asia. Throughout the broken and warring world of today it would show that this Nation recognizes its responsibility for making efforts toward the restoration of law and order and that wherever its peaceful influence can effectively be thrown it will be thrown on the side of independence and freedom and against militarized aggression. It would thus powerfully tend to confirm the already great influence which has been exercised by the repeal last autumn of the automatic embargo legislation.

efforts toward the restoration of law and order and that wherever its peaceful influence can effectively be thrown it will be thrown on the side of independence and freedom and against militarized aggression."

Stimson also held that the proposed action would fortify the good effects which followed the act of Congress last year repealing the arms embargo. It would again show that the American people were "not afraid to discriminate between right and wrong," and would identify us more firmly on the side of the peace-loving nations rather than as "an unwilling ally" of aggressor nations.

Treaty Expiration Noted

He emphasized that the United States would be "morally free" to place restrictions on its commerce with Japan after January 26, when the six months' notice of our abrogation of the Japanase-American commercial treaty expires.

Taking issue with those who argue that such proposals might lead us into war with Japan, Stimson said that "the very last thing which the Japanese government desires is a war with the United States." This was proved, he continued, by the Japanese reaction to denunciation of the commercial teraty.

Instead of threatening war, Japan "put the brakes" on anti-American acts in China, began issuing conciliatory statements, and organized a movement in this country to try to persuade the United States to negotiate a new treaty, and also to offer good offices for mediation in China.

He strongly urged against any mediation by this country now. He asserted that the Japanese military efforts were beginning to "bog down," and that recent events had given the Chinese government renewed confidence to resist Japanese peaec terms.

Any attempt by the United States "to force peace upon China," he went on, would not bring enduring peace, but would merely help Japan acquire 'legal title" to territory she has seized by force.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Symphonic Fantasy, "Aus Italien" (Richard Strauss), Symphony No. 3 in F major (Brahms).

Constitution Hall should have been crowded last evening when Hans Kindler conducted the National Symphony Orchestra in one of its best concerts thus far this season. Probably those who abstained from attendance, leaving vacancies which reproached them, did not realize that they would hear a splendid performance of Brahms' Third Symphony prefaced by the orchestra's initial reading of "Aus Italien," that pitcuresque symphonic fantasy composed by youthful Richard Strauss more than half a century ago when his romantic impetus was at its freshest. The admirable and eloquent disclosure of Brahms was alone worth the trip to the auditorium, and the relatively unfamiliar Strauss was an added pleasure.

It is curious how many German composers found inspiration in visits to Italy. Possibly the first was Heinrich Schuetz, the "father" of German music, in the early years of the seventeenth century long before Goethe wrote so luringly: "Kennst du das land wo die citronen bluehm." Handel and Mozart experienced the spell of the south, and so did Mendelssohn. One could go on with a considerable list, but the significant point is that in every case the Teutonic tendency toward stolidity was leavened by a lightness of spirit.

Strauss was only 22 when he crossed the Alps and came home with vivid impressions of Italian life, among them a folk song, "Funiculi, Funicula," by Luigi Denza of Castellamare, who later settled in London as a teacher at the Royal Academy. Some commentators have assumed that Strauss was unaware of the authorship of the melody and took it to be one of those folk songs whose composers have been forgotten. It is unlikely that Strauss was less intelligent than Hugo Wolf, who also heard the song in Italy and wrote enthusiastically to a friend about the composer who had so perfectly caught the popular idiom.

Anyway, Strauss used the song effectively in the last movement of "Aus Italien" and Denza doubtless appreciated the compliment. A better place for its preservation it would be hard to find, for "Aus Italien" is a compelling and attractive work. Its wealth of melody and its irresistible potency in evoking the color and vitality of the scenes it depicts make it much more enjoyable than "Ein Heldenleben" and other monumental scores which Strauss later erected. Its dominant mood is the joy of living and it is not encumbered with attempts to turn music into biography or philosophy.

A more serene joy is also the basis for the third symphony of Brahms. Hanslick said that its basic note is the self-conscious strength that rejoices in deeds, and that is an apt way of putting it. There are grave moments in the symphony, moments when the grimness of reality mingles with the poesy of idealism, but there are as well the genial and beautiful slow movement and the incomparable peace of the final coda.

Carol Refuses Land Cession To Hungary

Rumania May Yield, Though, to Italian Plan For Settling Dispute

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Jan. 10.—Rumanian officials asserted tonight that Rumania was ready to settle long-standing differences with Hungary, but that any territorial cession was out of the question.

Hungary wants Rumania to give up Transylvania, part of the territory Rumania won when the Austro-Hungarian Empire was broken up.

Despite the insistence of Rumanian authorities they would not even discuss cession, the feeling grew that King Carol might yield soon to an Italian-backed plan for settlement.

Budapest reports said the Italian and Hungarian foreign ministers, Count Ciano and Count Csaky, last week-end had worked out such a program.

Under this plan, to which the Budapest government is said to have agreed, Hungary would give up claims to Transylvania for the present in return for a Rumanian promise of territorial revision after the present war.

In payment for that promise, guaranteed by Italy, Rumania would receive assurance of full Italian and Hungarian support against any Russian attack on Bessarabia, the former Russian province she gained after the World War.

If Rumania ignores an invitation for a settlement with Hungary, Budapest sources indicated, Italy and Hungary are prepared to leave her to her fate. Moreover, Hungarians asserted that should the Red Army penetrate the Rumanian frontier, Hungary would enter Transylvania.

Italy was understood to have a similar plan for settling differences between Rumania and Bulgaria, which desires return of the Dobruja district, an area of mixed nationalities that Rumania took after the second Balkan war in 1913.

Reports from Belgrade indicated that Italy was trying to draw Yugoslavia also into her front against possible Russian expansion into southeast Europe.

The Yugoslav government announced that the Balkan Entente would meet in Belgrade February 2-4. Entente members are Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey. It was assumed that Italian efforts to line up a southeastern European front would be the center of entente attention with the Italian and Bulgarian ministers in Belgrade keeping in close contact with the conference.

Rumanian officials, in informally rejecting the idea of territorial concessions, said Rumania was quite willing to begin talks for economic concessions and other moves to improve relations with Hungary.

Budapest sources considered this Rumanian attitude as a natural starting point in the international poker game and professed belief Bucharest was striving for the best possible terms.

Mrs. Roosevelt Greets 'Graduates' of Infantile Paralysis With Cookies at Children's Hospital

At Children's Hospital dispensary yesterday, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt joined more than 30 infantile paralysis convalescents in demonstrating how to make cookies, cocoa and sandwiches disappear at the party on physical check-up day for youngsters treated at the hospital last year. The First Lady visited the occupational therapy department and read nursery rhymes to the youngsters

A double feature attraction—the First Lady and party cookies—packed the Children's Hospital dispensary yesterday for a reunion of the 1939 "graduating class" in infantile paralysis.

Strictly speaking, it was physical check-up day, but the event was a gala party. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt greeted more than 30 polio convalescents and their mothers and all the boys and girls demonstrated how to make cakes, cocoa and sandwiches disappear.

During 1939 Children's Hospital treated 83 infantile paralysis cases. The approximately 50 who missed yesterday's party have moved from the city, are in convalescent homes or, in a few instances, were too ill to attend.

The program marked the inauguration of a service which Supt. Mattie Gibson hopes will become an annual event: Reuniting youngsters who have been treated for infantile paralysis in the hospital in the previous year so that they may be given a careful physical examination.

As the First Lady walked into the orthopedic treatment room, she was greeted by a loud and cheery, "Hello, Mrs. Roosevelt" by 5-year-old Ernest Hively, who recognized her instantly. Ernest, who was more dead than alive when he was admitted to Children's last August, is making excellent progress in his battle against poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis).

The Hively boy is one of the two patients now hospitalized at Children's for the crippling disease. The other is an 11-year-old colored girl.

Mrs. Roosevelt read a nursery rhyme to Ernest at the request of photographers. She posed with a cluster of ambulatory youngsters, a few of whom were nudged into the picture by proud mothers. And she visited the occupational therapy department, where Mrs. Lena Hitchcock, chief, explained how the convalescents are taught to operate a saw, carve wood, sew and perform other recreational chores whose main purpose is to exercise damaged limbs.

Roosevelt Gets Refugee Colony Report

Experts Sail Today For Dominican Republic To Complete Details

By the Associated Press

Efforts for the first official colonization project in the Western Hemisphere to aid Europe's political refugees reached a climax yesterday when President Roosevelt heard the report of a group of experts sailing today from New York for the Dominican Republic to conclude details for settling 500 refugee families.

The group will draw up a contract with the Dominican Republic on the first step of a program which envisages the eventual settlement of 100,000 Jewish and non-Jewish refugees.

The delegation will be headed by James N. Rosenberg, who visited President Roosevelt yesterday. Others in the group include Robert T. Pell, of the State Department's European affairs division, representing Myron T. Taylor, chairman of the United States delegation to the intergovernmental committee on political refugees; Stephen V. C. Morris, secretary of the intergovernmental committee.

The contract offered by the Dominican government through Gen. Rafael Trujillo, on a recent visit to the United States will provide for:

Naturalization after two years' residence.

A government pledge of legislation to assure the settlers "full civil, economic and religious rights" with an "honorable, just and equal opportunity so that they may pursue their occupations and life free from molestation and persecution."

Waivers of the usually required $500 per person immigration fee and import duties on necessary tools and equipment.

Requirement that "the bulk" of the settlers engage in "farming or related enterprises," although admitting qualified "necessary professional, technical and skilled supplementation needed for a balanced economy."

Dominican government cooperation with the association in supplying necessary transportation and offering adequate land for necessary housing arrangements during the organization of the colonization plan.

Dominican government cooperation for suitable employment of the settlers in agricultural work, road building and other similar activities and in establishment and development of, "particularly at the outset, handicraft industries for the settlers."

Housing and care of unmarried young men and girls arriving with the first group of settlers with "dormitories, schoolhouse, and agricultural training grounds."

The 50 families to be sent to the republic will join about 1,700 refugees, mostly Spaniards, to have settled there in the last six months, Pastoriza said.

U. S. Grants Norway Credit Of $10,000,000

Policy of Aid for Finns Extended to Rest of Scandinavia

The United States Government last night extended to other Scandinavian lands its policy of aiding Finland in her struggle against the Soviet Union by granting credits of $10,000,000 to Norway. The sum is to be spent in the purchase of agricultural products, manufactured and other domestic supplies here.

The loan follows by exactly one month a similar loan to Finland of $10,000,000, also made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Import-Export Bank. It can be used to obtain much needed supplies of agricultural products, such as cotton and wheat. It cannot be used for arms purchases, which the Norwegians would need desperately should the Soviet drive against Finland be extended to Norway, and particularly the northern port of Narvik.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, meanwhile proposed in a joint resolution that Congress appropriate $20,000,000 for the purchase of food, clothing, raw materials and manufactured goods, except implements of war, for the relief of the people of Finland.

Congressional leaders awaited guidance from President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull before arranging for action on numerous bills designed to provide financial assistance to Finland.

The President said at his press conference Tuesday that he might have something to say on this subject next week.

Like the Finnish government, Norway has always enjoyed the highest of credit ratings in the United States, and has never defaulted on its dollar bonds, which still stand high on the American markets.

Now that both Norway and Sweden are being called upon by the Finns to give them material aid of a substantial nature, any American assistance to these two Scandinavian states is expected to be reflected in the ability of the Norwegians and Swedes to extend such aid. Assistance to the Finns by this method is in some ways even more effective than direct help for it frees the hand of the Norwegians and makes it possible for them to ship the Finns arms which otherwise they might be unable to spare.

Seal Drive Continues

With $4,553.15 reported, Mrs. Norbert Melnick, Arlington County chairman in charge of the Christmas Seal sale, announced letters will go out in a last appeal to reach the county's quota of $5,000.

Abe to Quit as Japanese Premier

premier is under way, but there is no reliable indication as to who will succeed Premier Abe.

Half a dozen of the usual names are being mentioned, including former Premier Koki Hirota, Gen. Kazushige Ugaki, former foreign minister; Gen. Gen Sugiyama, former war minister; Gen. Hikosaburo Hata, present war minister, and Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi, former war minister. The selection of a new premier seems to be largely in the hands of the lord keeper of the privy seal, Kurahei Yuasa, and of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the privy council.

There is a strong desire to have Prince Konoye form another cabinet, but it is unlikely that he can be prevailed upon to do so, recalling how anxious he was to relinquish the premiership.

The change in cabinets is regarded as particularly critical at this time because of the difficulties of the internal situation as well as Japan's delicate position in the international field, with negotiations going on with the United States on the renewal of the commercial treaty, due to expire on January 26. Hope that Japan may be able to arrive at some understanding with America before the trade pact expires has grown slim.

of the last mines needed to complete Britain's "Maginot" line of the sea—a £30,000,000 protective shield for east coast shipping.

Other British official reports were meager, saying merely that bombs had been dropped "near" Sylt during patrol and reconnaissance flights. British security patrols are intensifying their flights over the North Sea and Frisian Islands, it was stated, to keep German bombers and mine-layers at home.

It was indicated from Danish advices, however, that both sides had infringed that country's neutrality in today's battles. One plane, presumably British, dropped nine bombs on the Danish island of Roem, near Sylt, doing little damage. The German Messerschmidt fighter which landed near Ballum, Denmark, was reported to have bullet holes in its gasoline tanks. The pilot was interned and the plane confiscated.

An official British statement promised full restitution if it was discovered, on investigation, that the plane which dropped bombs on Danish soil was British.

Blenheim bombers, reported used by the R. A. F. in today's raids, are two-motored planes with a top speed, at 20,000 feet, of 277 miles per hour.

The German aerial invasion of British coastal waters was extended meanwhile, to the southeast Scottish coast.

Watchers there said they saw two Nazi bombers attack an unidentified steamer with bombs and machine-gun fire.

The steamer zigzagged until British fighters appeared and chased off the attackers.

The toll of Tuesday's mass attacks by German warplanes on British and neutral shipping was increased with the announcement that a second British steamer, the 1,985-ton Oakgrove, had gone down after an assault from the air. The Gowrie, a 689-ton coastal boat, also was sunk yesterday. The Oakgrove's casualties were not determined.

It also was disclosed that the 1,000-ton British ship Upminister was bombed, but not sunk. Three of her crew were killed. Survivors said they were machine-gunned in the lifeboats.

The announcement added that the Danish ships Ivan Kondrup, 3,369 tons, and Feddy, 955 tons, which were reported sunk by German air raiders yesterday, were still afloat and probably would be brought into port.

The admiralty said no information was available on the casualties on the Danish ships.

(Germans claimed eight British ships were sunk in Tuesday's raids off the east English coast, in which at least 12 ships were attacked from the air.)

British fishing boat operators, who had five vessels raked by Nazi machine-gun fire yesterday, discussed defensive arming of fishing trawlers with admiralty and ministry of fisheries representatives at Hull today.

on the Finnish front today but said that on the whole "nothing of importance took place."

Britain's economic warfare against Germany in the Balkans today drew the fire of the Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, which printed a special article declaring the English were maneuvering to extend the war to that part of Europe.

Criticizing Britain for sending capital into the Balkans, the article said she was "availing herself of the economic and financial dependence of small countries of southeastern Europe" and was "making all efforts to involve these countries in war."

Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Greece were especially mentioned.

Russia began formal negotiations for a trade pact with a Japanese economic delegation at a two-hour session.

Roosevelt Rural Hospital Proposal Given Approval

President Roosevelt's proposal for construction of 50 small hospitals in rural areas now deprived of hospital facilities was conditionally approved yesterday by a group representing the American, the Catholic and the Protestant hospital associations and the American Medical Association.

The group presented its point of view in a conference with the President at the White House.

The conditions under which they approved the plan, which would be undertaken on an experimental basis, were that there should be no competition with existing hospital facilities, that communities should be able to maintain and operate the new hospital units, and that personnel standards should be maintained.

Nearly a score of prominent physicians and officials of hospital associations attended the conference. Present were Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Navy Surgeon General and the President's personal physician; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, and Miss Josephine Roche, head of the interdepartmental committee on public health.

O'Conor Studying Plan to Build Up Maryland Beaches

A program for preservation and development of Maryland's bay and seaside resorts is being considered under the direction of Gov. O'Conor, it was revealed here yesterday at a meeting of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association.

The disclosure was made by Dean S. S. Steinberg of the College of Engineering of University of Maryland, who attended the meeting as the Governor's personal representative.

Dr. Steinberg, introduced to the gathering of officials interested in perservation of the Nation's beaches, said "Gov. O'Conor is anxious to undertake a program of work for Maryland." He cited that the State has 3,500 miles of shoreline on the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay, that 16 of the 23 counties of the State are tidewater.

ruler's own airplane to take pictures of military value for the Soviet Union.

There was no official comment upon all this, but it was stated authoritatively that Dozenberg, who will be sentenced on January 17, had been "cooperating" fully with the Government and would take the stand against Browder.

Three other Communists are under indictment for passport misuse. Of the five thus accused, the authorities have described Dozenberg as second in importance only to Browder himself.

The United States attorney's office said Dozenberg, who was naturalized in 1911, had given his papers to Browder in 1921. With these papers, it is charged, Browder obtained a passport to travel in Russia.

Dozenberg was prominent in the Communist party until 1928, when he suddenly dropped out of sight. Later he was found living in Washington with his wife under the name Nicholas Dallant.

'In Person' Stars Begin To Make Selves Known

Ruth Gordon Coming for 'Abe Lincoln' Premiere; Burgess Meredith Stops Off, May Be Back; This, That and the Other About the Theater

RUTH GORDON, noted Broadway star, is the first of a distinguished group of stage and screen celebrities to commit herself to a "personal appearance" in Washington for the world premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," at RKO-Keith's Theater, on Monday, January 22. Miss Gordon, who plays the part of Mary Todd Lincoln, opposite Raymond Massey in the title role, in RKO-Radio's picturization of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play, cancelled plans to return to Hollywood in order to attend the premiere in company with a long list of other Hollywood and Washington notables.

BELL

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will head an imposing roster of Washington's official and social leaders who will attend the premiere, sponsored by the Women's Press Club of Washington for the benefit of that organization's endowed bed in Children's Hospital and fellowship fund.

It took Hollywood 20 years to "discover" Ruth Gordon. She makes her film debut in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," following a notable career in the parent theater which began with her appearance, at the age of 17, with Maude Adams in Sir James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan." Except for the fact that she was importuned to read, and liked, Robert E. Sherwood's screen script of his own stage play, she probably still would be a stranger to the Klieg lights and cameras.

In his film treatment, Mr. Sherwood has expanded the role of Mary Todd into an inspired, deeply human figure, determined to overcome any obstacles blocking the rise of a husband in whom she perceives divine qualities of leadership. It affords opportunity for Miss Gordon to turn in another creative bit of portraiture—so she took it.

Among the Gordon stage successes may be mentioned Ibsen's "The Doll's House" "The Country Wife," Tarkington's "Seventeen," "Serena Blandish," "Three Cornered Moon," "Hotel Universe," "They Shall Not Die" and "Saturday's Children."

So finally, as Maurice Chevalier would say, you will meet her "in the flesh."

Speaking of Mrs. Roosevelt, as we were somewhere back there, the First Lady was an amused and interested member of the audience at the Tuesday night performance of "Three After Three," at the National. Yesterday afternoon she had Mizti Green and Mary Brian, two of the three charming mainstays of the cast, as her guests at tea in the White House. Prior to that, Miss Brian had had a busy late morning and early afternoon on Capitol Hill, where she was received by her distinguished fellow-Texans—Mary was born in Dallas—Vice President Garner and Senator Tom Connally and then, save for the protective wing of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, would have been trampled by admirers. Viewing the session of the Senate from the gallery, Mary was spied from the floor by Senator "Happy" Chandler, of Kentucky, who immediately hunted her out and so precipitated the "riot." One intrepid young Senate page diffidently approached the stage and screen star and requested seven autographs for bashful colleagues "on the Republican side"—and got them. A nice, busy day, what with the matinee and all. That matinee at the National yesterday, incidentally, was right on the fringes of a sellout. "Three After Three" will wind up its week on E street with a gross in the neighborhood of $20,000, if I have my guesser on straight. That ain't "chicken feed," even if that is more or less what the musical comedy is all about.

If you were down at the airport Tuesday afternoon and thought you saw Burgess Meredith step out of a New York plane for a breather while the ship also caught its breath, you were right. It was Burgess Meredith. His stopover in the Capital was just long enough for him to drop the hint that he might be back in a week or so for a personal appearance in connection with first Washington showings of the screen version of John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" which, in all likelihood, will follow "Swanee River" at Loew's Palace. "Buzz" Meredith hasn't been seen on a local stage since he was here last year with Orson Welles in his cinematic stage treatment of "Five Kings," another of his brilliant but this time not too-successful experiments in revolutionized Shakespeare.

The Earle Theater has been pulling an unostentatious fast one these past few weeks. Without preliminary announcement or the usual fanfare, the Thirteenth street ace Warner house has been shedding its old seats and sprouting new ones. By now the whole job may be completed—if not, in the very near future, anyway. Last Friday we thought somebody was putting on a playful gag when one of those new, spring loge chairs flew up and spanked us on the license tags, but it was only part of the new job and that's the way they all are. Comfortable, too, once you have slapped them down and made them stay put.

The Theater Guild announces that the world premiere of Ernest Hemingway's first full-length play, "The Fifth Column," will be celebrated on Friday evening, January 26—the same day we are going with the "Wind" at the Palace—in the Shubert Theater, New Haven, Conn. Benjamin F. Glazer has prepared the acting version, which will have Franchot Tone, Frances Farmer and Lenore Ulric in the principal roles, under the direction of Lee Strasberg. Mr. Tone and Miss Ulric haven't set foot on a Washington rostrum since goodness knows when, but Miss Farmer, you may recall, was here last season opposite Elia Kazan in the Group Theater's production of Clifford Odets' "Golden Boy." Anyhow, Mr. Hemingway has a nice cast.

And about that business of casts, anyone thinking that Washington's Civic Theater draws its acting talent solely from among the Capital's native Thespians will be disillusioned by "Criminal at Large," opening at Wardman Park on next Sunday night. Among the principals in this Edgar Wallace mystery-thriller, Bill Jarvis was born in Sitka, Alaska; Bette Ryder, in Atlantic City; Dorothy Flynn, New York; John Pooley Wright, Bob Langley and Jim Faris hail from St. Joseph, Mo., Jonesboro, Ark., and Kansas City, Mo., respectively; Al Williams and Jack Porter, from Montgomery, Ala., and Chicago; Mason Wright says, "I was born in Omaha, Nebr., christened in Connecticut and have been living in a trunk ever since." Believe it or not, there are two Washingtonians in "Criminal at Large,"—Paul Keyes and Ted Tenley. That, at least, is something.

So they are telling me that 1,000,000 man-hours is the approximate amount of human labor involved in the Technicolor production of "Gone With the Wind," according to the cost sheets. Always thought Dave Selznick was dawdling along too long on that one. What he should have done, of course, was to have hired a million men and women and made the thing in an hour!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 10.

Don't tell me we're not harking back to the early boom days of film-thrillers—the era of the hi-wide-and-handsome, gun-toting, buck-aroo-riding cow-boys! Gary Cooper is just finishing making the "Westerner" . . . Cecil B. DeMille is making another Milestone at Paramount with Joel McCrea, Madeleine Carroll, Bob Preston and Akim Tamiroff in "Northwest Mounted Police" . . . Then McCrea goes into another Western, "Sunrise in My Pocket" . . . At Warners Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins are finishing up "Virginia City" as a technicolor sequel to "Dodge City." And "Geronimo," Paramount's document about the Apache war chiefs, not only features Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, but a ream of redskins and the entire Eighth United States Cavalry . . . Even Rhett Butler Gable goes yippeeee in "Boom Town;" with "Northwest Passage" soon ready for release by the same studio.

HOPPER

The comics too have alfalfa in their hair—with Jack Benny spurring Rochester on in "Buck Benny Rides Again" and the Marx Bros., ready to go to Arizona for "Go West"—though I'll be darned if I can figure how Harpo will get on a horse with that harp of his. . . . Frank Lloyd will release "Tree of Liberty," and there's "Rangers of Fortune," "Eyes of Texas" and Sun of Glory" all in the scripting stage at Paramount. . . . Plus, of course, all those "Hopalong Cassidy" thrillers with Bill Boyd and the scores of independent blood-and-thunder chiller-dillers . . . So Hollywood, which feared the war would kill the industry has revived it—by toning down on all those sly sophisticated stories and bringing about a cycle of flag-waving, red-blooded, virile pictures that will make the movie industry bigger and better than ever before.

The passing of the old Hippodrome in New York reminds me of the time De Wolf Hopper did an act there with six trained elephants. When we got into the war one of the first men drafted was the elephant trainer and everybody was in a panic about letting the pachyderms tramp on the stage to do their act, that is, everybody but De Wolf Hopper, who should have been—because one of them was supposed to sit on him. Wolfie said: "What are you worried about, they're friendly fellows!" Whereupon he took them on, put them through their paces and used to include them on his noctural rounds by taking armfuls of food from the Lamb's Club nightly to feed his "friends" the elephants . . . I wonder if they ever forgot?

Now that the Government is trying to collect $104,000 in back taxes from Charles Laughton I'm beginning to understand why his hump was so big in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." That must have been where the internal revenue man was hiding.

Actor Perfects ArchitectureModel

A new idea, that may possibly revise the whole system of architectural design, was being worked over by Albert Dekker recently with astonishing results.

Dekker, who occupies the title role in the all-Technicolor adventure picture, "Dr. Cyclops," has figured out a system of home design by which the builders can discover in advance not only what his place will look like, but just how livable it will be. He uses a scale model with movable parts.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Chicago, Jan. 10 (INS).—Exhibitors sensing big "boxoffice" in a co-starring appearance of Bill Powell and the bride, Diana Lewis, and who wired Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to that effect, are going to be disappointed. Curious though the public may be about the new Mrs. Powell there's not a chance she'll be in Bill's next, "I Love You Again." The best reason is that Bill's screen bride and favorite costar, Myrna Loy, is again set to appear with him and there will be no last minute change of plans, even though the real Mrs. P., is under contract.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"I Love You Again" is the hilarious farce written by Octavus Roy Cohen which ran in a national magazine. It's about a sophisticated gentleman stricken with amnesia right after his marriage. Larry Weingarten will produce.

The Northwest Mounted, traditionally tracking down their man, never had more trouble than Cecil B. De Mille in getting his hero for "Northwest Mounted Police." But contracts will be inked for George Brent to be borrowed from Warners, to play Sergeant Jim Blake opposite Madeleine Carroll, in C. B's. Canadian opus. George's selection ends a man hunt for which a half dozen top stars had been named, including Fredric March. Speaking of George he was delighted today to receive a letter from the real "Wild Bill" Donovan (the role he played in the "fighting Sixty-ninth") saying how much he liked the way he was portrayed on the screen.

Ruth Hussey is one young lady coming along slowly but surely. She gets the second most important feminine role to Greer Garson, as Charlotte in "Susan and God," and I happen to know several important "names" were tested for this part. In spite of the fact there's been little publicity about this M-G-M newcomer, she's rated big roles in "Northwest Passage," "Another Thin Man" and several of the Hardy films. Fredric March and Greer Garson are the co-stars of "Susan and God," but I'd advise you to keep an eye on Ruth's career in 1940.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Chicago collected at random: The Chicago critics were kind to Constance Bennett, but pretty hard on the old-fashioned Noel Coward play, "Easy Virtue," which is of the vintage of 1926. Ashton Stevens thought it was a pity that Dick Bennett's girl didn't get a better play. One of the pleasant things of this Chicago trip is seeing old friends I haven't seen in years. The luncheon given me by the Headliners Club brought out many familiar faces. Sidney Abel (who used to be sales head for Fox), Clifton Webb, Ella Logan, pretty Ann Miller and Helen Flint among those who took bows.

Joan Crawford gets back in Hollywood Friday; Charles Boyer startling the Hollywood natives wearing burnsides, getting ready for his role in "All This and Heaven, Too;" M-G-M isn't crazy about the idea, but Spencer Tracy has taken up polo again; Prince and Princess Vasseli in Los Angeles conferring with the heads of the Finnish relief committees for the benefit to be staged at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco; Walter Hagen stagging it at the House of Murphy.

Well, two more days and we'll be headed for home. Arleen Whelan and Susan Hayward are flying; the rest of us take the more leisurely train. Joy Hodges goes to Omaha to supervise the remodeling of her new home. We've all had a grand time on this tour, but it will be wonderful to be home.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 10.

CHANGE: The addresses in Manhattan will be renumbered soon—patterned after the Chicago and Philadelphia grid plan . . . legislation to be introduced at the next meeting of the City Council will provide that the current numbers be changed so that they will be uniform—and more visible . . . Under the proposed simplified setup, for example, 500 Sixth avenue will be only one block away from 500 Seventh avenue.

CRIME: James Wheeler-Hill, former National Secretary of the German-American Bund, is revealing to the District Attorney the names of the Bund's secret backers—who are high in business and religious circles . . . The predicament of Wheeler-Hill and also of Fritz Kuhn is a result of evidence supplied by a former Storm Trooper named Winterscheidt, who now is in jail on a morals charge . . . Winterscheidt, who became the Dixie Davis of the Bund, is supplying additional facts and will be rewarded by the Parole Board.

YOUTH: Alexander Woollcott went to San Francisco last month to meet Kathleen Norris . . . Mrs. Norris swept across the railroad station to meet him, as Woollcott described it, "like a frigate in full sail" . . . When they returned to the Norris home the novelist introduced Alec to her 7-year-old niece, who warned him: "Dorothy is coming" . . . "And who is Dorothy, my dear?" asked the visitor . . . "Dorothy," the little girl replied, "is the friend I hate."

FAME: Random House's new biographic advertisement will read: "Two years ago we gave you the 'Life of Katharine Cornell.' Last year we gave you the 'Life of Helen Hayes.' This year we give you the best of all—the 'Life of Donald Duck.'"

TRAP: In his last two previous messages to Congress President Roosevelt baited the Republicans into an applause trap. He stated something which elicited vigorous applause from them, only to follow it with a reverse punch line which left them sheepish . . . Last week Joe Martin, the G. O. P. Republican minority leader, was on the joint committee which escorted Roosevelt into the chamber . . . Roosevelt smiled and warned Martin: "Don't let your boys go out on the limb again" . . . "They won't," Martin assured . . . But then when Roosevelt talked about reducing the budget, Martin sat quietly—and watched his Republican colleagues cheer and applaud. And the President ad libbed, directly at them: "You can't have your cake and eat it, too."

VISIT: Saturday night Sam Goldwyn—who just had arrived in New York—was asked by a friend how long he expected to stay here. . . . "Till Wednesday," Sam replied. "I've got a lot of phone calls to make."

AWARD: Julien Huxley, scientist brother of Aldous, is here on a lecture tour until February 7. His lectures always conclude with the peace plea for a United States of Europe . . . The Rockefeller Foundation, also hoping for peace, has presented him with a $10,000 grant.

CHATTER: There will be a flareup between Dewey's backers and the Young Republicans—who demand the right to have two delegates at the Convention . . . James M. Power, the Federal Jury Commissioner whose job pays no salary, will join the staff of District Attorney O'Dwyer . . . Brenda Frazier and Betty Lawford, bored with their respective escorts, Shipwreck Kelly and Ted Husing, last night danced with each other at El Morocco . . . The Shuberts will produce operettas at Miami's Orange Bowl stadium . . . The FCC has agreed to consider WNYC's application for full time . . . Firestone will erect two big rubber factories in Rio and Bombay.

LESSON: Laura Ingalls, the aviatrix, went to the Dempsey-Vanderbilt bar after the Miami air meet and discussed her recent suspension. . . . "I was grounded because of an ordinance which forbids the dropping of advertising matter from planes over the Capitol in Washington," she said, "but I'd do it again" . . . "Haven't you learned your lesson?" she was asked . . . "Well," she confessed, "I learned only that there's a legal difference between advertising soap—and advertising peace."

ENTERPRISE: The Marquis de C., whose wife inherited the fabulous R. oil fortune, will venture into a new business . . . The Marquis' late mother, who was famed for the beauty of her skin up to the time she was 80, used a face lotion which her son had been presenting to his friends . . . Now he'll market this beauty cream, using the brand name "La Primavera."

Recordings Given to Library To Bring Classics Into Homes

Discs of Scores by Old Masters Will Be Distributed Like Books; Presented Formally at Central Unit

The Washington Public Library yesterday added to its music collection 100 albums of symphonic recordings, gift of the National Committee for Music Appreciation, along with more than a score of albums from individual donors in Washington.

George F. Bowerman, chief librarian, received the collection from Edward T. Ingle, national director of the Music Appreciation Committee, in a brief ceremony at the Central Public Library.

The new collection, library officials said, is to be circulated among patrons of the library on the same basis as books, but they were unable to say how soon the circulation will start. Protective jackets for the records are needed and a set of instructions for care of records will be drawn up before circulation can begin, officials said.

In presenting the albums, Ingle said the District Public Library "can be the instrumentality through which people in every walk of life can hear the music of Brahms, Beethoven, Debussy, and all the great music masters, just as great books are available to all through this library."

"Music is no longer a luxury for the few but a necessity for the many," he said. "The time has come when music played over and over again becomes an integral part of the lives of millions who might not otherwise have the opportunity of sharing these riches."

Dr. Edwin N. C. Barnes, music director in the District Public Schools, presented the music gifts of the following:

Senator Capper, of Kansas; Mrs. Fanny A. Roberts, president of the Washington Music Teachers Association; Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Board of Education president; Dr. Norma Bird, psychology lecturer at the American University school of public affairs; Representative Dirksen, of Illinois; Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of the District Schools; Dr. Thomas R. Taylor, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schieffeler, Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools; Miss Charl Williams, of the National Education Association; Dr. and Mrs. Edwin N. C. Barnes, and Representative Hawks, of Wisconsin.

Ice and Snow Bury Screen At the Little

'The Challenge' and 'The Ski Chase' Have Alpine Settings

By Richard L. Coe.

"THE CHALLENGE." Denham Films picturization of a screen play by Emeric Pressburger, adapted to the screen by Patrick Kirwan and Milton Rosmer, with Robert Douglas, Luis Trenker, Mary Clare, Joan Gardner, Frank Birch, Fred Groves, Geoffrey Wardwell, Cyril Smith and Moran Caplat. Directed by Vincent Korda. Previewed Thursday, January 4. At the Little Theater.

Since climbing the Matterhorn is one of the things we will not be doing for some time to come, the Little Theater's new feature is furnishing that thrill in a vicarious but breath-taking fashion. "The Challenge" is the film's title and its setting is one of the most spectacular of all the Alps.

As a twin feature to this Swiss adventure, "The Ski Chase" moves further into Central Europe to the Austrian Tyrol, where Hannes Schneider, the world's outstanding skiing instructor and now on the staff of Dartmouth College, exhibits his prowess in jumps that are daring and beautiful. Neither of these pictures has been shown in Washington before, and while "The Ski Chase" has been cut somewhat to fit a double bill, it retains the unity and novelty of an original.

In these days, under more normal conditions to be sure, clambering up the Matterhorn is a frequent achievement of the accomplished summer climber, but in 1865 no man had ever gotten to the top. To the uninitiated, the Italian side looked the easier and the nationalistic jealousy with which the Italiians aimed at the unsumountable forms "The Challenge." Two separate parties of Englishmen sought to be the first up and the friendship of a British artist and an Italian guide was sacrificed in the contention.

But the real hero of "The Challenge" is the cameraman. George Perinal was Mr. Korda's chief photographer and he seems to have gotten everywhere a man and his camera could get on the snow-covered mountain. One would suspect that montage and all the tricks of Mr. Perinal's magic eye must have been employed, but one is equally assured that most of the scenes were authentically filmed.

The story is one which research bears out to be almost historically accurate; actually the two parties did not come so close to victory, the Italian party being three days behind the Britishers. An all-English cast seems strange in this localized setting, but Mr. Trenker's guide is a performance which could scarcely be improved upon. He is a performer at home in the Alps, "Storm Over Mont Blanc," "The Rebel" and "The Doomed Battalion," being three of his earlier cinemas having a similar setting.

Comedy on the snow is "The Ski Chase's" most amusing feature for one to whom the intricacies of skiing are just that. Guzzi Lantshner and Walter Riml, giant and dwarf of last season's "Slalom," share honors with the expert Schneider in this brief and flashing snowball.

Civic Theater

"CRIMINAL AT LARGE." Edgar Wallace's mystery-comedy hit is the third of this season's offerings by the Washington Civic Theater. It opens a week's engagement at the Wardman Park Theater on Sunday evening. A prewar depiction of Scotland Yard, the melodrama takes place in rural England at a time when a light going out did not mean a blackout. Ted Allison, Roger Cerioni, Herbert Fleming, T. Bedford Jones, John Mason, Leo Cavaleski and Ted L. Curto.

Children's Theater

"RIP VAN WINKLE." Clare Tree Major's dramatization for children of the Washington Irving story will be performed on Saturday morning at 10:30 at the National Theater. An unusual feature of the performance promises to be Indian dances by Da-o-son-ga, a Pawnee Indian.

Atlas

BERT WALTON returns Sunday afternoon to the stage of the northeast house. In addition to his own act, Walton will introduce Lloyd and Willis, musical comedy dancers, and Polly Jenkins with her Playboys, featured in the Gene Autry Western films. On the screen, Kay Kyser will star in "That's Right, You're Wrong" and Basil Rathbone and Boris Karloff in "Tower of London."

Star's Secretary

Following her success as leading lady in "Meet Dr. Christian," Dorothy Lovett, film newcomer, played the important role of Adolphe Menjou's secretary in "That's Right, You're Wrong," in which Kay Kyser and band made their film bow.

Star Student

Joan Crawford recently resumed piano lessons for the first time since her school days.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Preparedness

When the present European war broke out, last September, the impact of that grim development on American economy was far less serious than had been the case at the outset of hostilities in 1914.

This time the United States was much better prepared to withstand the serious dislocating effects of an overseas struggle of major magnitude. For side by side with notable efforts that were made to prevent the conflict, the Government had with praiseworthy foresight taken steps to cushion our financial and economic structure against the shock of war.

In this useful endeavor the Department of State played a wholly laudable part. The same desire to prepare the United States for whatever lies ahead explains the establishment at this time of another committee in that department, to gather data on and study the immediate and long-range results of belligerent measures.

This committee, under the chairmanship of the Undersecretary, Mr. Sumner Welles, with Mr. Hugh Wilson as vice chairman, is also authorized to consider ways and means of best handling the problems arising out of war developments so as to prevent a shock to American economy "and to prevent undesirable enduring results."

How long the present war will last no one can say. But for as long as it lasts the United States will be profoundly affected by the dislocations involved. It is clearly to the national interest to keep a watchful eye on such developments. It is equally the counsel of wisdom for the Government to prepare for the day when the war will be over, when enormous problems of readjustment and reconstruction will immediately arise.

Labor Contracts

It would seem that the question of whether the National Labor Relations Board can require an employer to put into writing an agreement with his employes will eventually have to be decided by the Supreme Court. This does not mean, however, that the Inland Steel Co. case, in which the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago denied such power to the NLRB, will be carried before the highest tribunal. Two other cases involving the same issue are in the process of adjudication. Either may afford a better opportunity to resolve this important question.

Indeed, the opinion of Judge Major at Chicago may not be subject to appeal. The court remanded the controversial order to the NLRB for rehearing. Even if the board should find some basis for appeal, it might prove futile. And certainly it would be unwise to carry before the Supreme Court an order supported by unfair procedure. In such cases the highest tribunal not infrequently concentrates on the procedural issues, leaving major questions of law undecided.

In the opinion of the circuit court, Charles A. Wood, NLRB trial examiner, "laid aside all semblance of serving in a judicial capacity." The NLRB recognized the error of its examiner in directing the official reporter to omit testimony and arguments which he classified as being "off the record." This ruling of the examiner was reversed by his superiors. But the court also found that he manifested a "hostile" attitude toward the steel company.

Obvious bias on the part of its subordinates has become a serious handicap to the board. Charges that NLRB employes have failed to maintain a judicial attitude recur more frequently than any other complaints in the House investigation of that agency. The board cannot too quickly eliminate this fatal weakness.

As to the NLRB's authority to require written contracts, the Court of Appeals held that collective bargaining procedure is mandatory but the "result is not." Clearly the board cannot force any company or any union to sign a contract. It has no power to compel employers and their employes to enter an agreement either written or oral. All that the law requires is that both parties participate in genuine collective bargaining negotiations.

The real issue, then, is whether the Inland Steel Co. entered into collective bargaining in good faith. Modern contracts dealing with wages, hours and working conditions are usually very complicated agreements. It is customary practice to put them into writing to minimize friction and misunderstanding. Refusal of the company to comply with this normal procedure might, therefore, be reasonably construed as a refusal to bargain collectively.

Give Us The Facts

With the opening of hearings today on the bill to extend the trade agreements program, one of the most vital issues of the 1940 session of Congress will be joined. Powerful political forces are gathering on both sides. Each seems to be marshaling its arguments and propaganda with the object of winning a political fight, instead of objectively examining a policy of vital concern to the national welfare.

Unless this tendency can be checked by the Ways and Means Committee, its hearings are likely to produce more heat than light. The character of the hearings may have a far-reaching effect upon the following debate in the House and Senate. It is of the utmost importance that they be devoted to the collection of pertinent data, with a minimum of loose claims and partisan denunciations.

What is most needed is a background of facts concerning the relation of the trade agreements to our foreign commerce. There are many misconceptions that should be cleared away. When the committee is ready to give the public and the House of Representatives a clear picture of what changes have been effected by the trade agreements, and what prospects the future holds for mutually profitable exchange of goods with other countries, there will be time enough to draw conclusions and decide upon future policy.

As an example of the type of information that is needed, the Tariff Commission has just released a study of the duty reductions resulting from the agreements in effect last November. If all the duty reductions in effect last November had been in force during 1937, and the quantity and value of imports during that year remained unchanged, the commission found, ad valorem duties or their equivalent would have been cut 20 per cent by the trade agreements.

A relatively small portion of our import trade has been affected by duty changes in the reciprocal pacts. Most of our imports have entered duty free for many years. The Tariff Commission has now found that only 42 per cent of our dutiable imports in 1937 would have been affected by lower tariffs agreed to by the Department of State up to last November.

That the trade agreements have not unloosed a flood of competitive foreign goods upon the American market is indicated by the fact that the total volume of imports for 1938 was about equal to that of 1931, when the Hawley-Smoot rates were fully in effect. At the same time, this fact deflates some of the claims that have been made in favor of the trade agreements program.

The Tariff Commission study shows that in many instances substantial duty reductions have been made. But Department of Commerce statistics show that our foreign trade declined in 1938 along with the slump in domestic business. Incidentally, the Tariff Commission notes that revenue from duties computed at the trade agreement rates would have been $113,000,000 less than under the preagreement rates.

A factual study of the agreements has been unduly postponed. Undoubtedly the Ways and Means Committee will want to make its final decision on the basis of enlightened national policy rather than mere statistics. But that task will be greatly facilitated if available facts concerning the trade agreements to date are impartially examined.

Russia Admits Defeat

In a communique issued on Tuesday the Russian high command admitted for the first time that the Red army has suffered reverses in Finland. As a result of fighting, it said, "Soviet troops withdrew several kilometers east of Suomussalmi."

To the outside world this admission of defeat merely confirms what is already known. It is no secret to Americans, for instance, that despite an enormous superiority in manpower, air power and mechanized strength the Red army has thus far been licked to a frazzle by the Finns.

Russians, however, will read the cryptic communique with a good deal of bewilderment. They have been told little of what has been going on along the borders of Finland and that little has contained no intimation of any reverses.

The Russian people were told at the outset, for instance, that the great masses of the Finnish people were yearning to be "liberated" from Gen. Mannerheim's "White Guards." They could thus believe the statements appearing in the Soviet press that a puppet Communist "government" was popular and that the Red army was welcomed with open arms by the Finns.

When weeks went by and the early reports of smashing victories were followed by a studied silence, some doubts must have crept into at least some Russian minds as to the truthfulness of the earlier claims of the Kremlin's propaganda machine. And now, to confirm their worst fears, the Russian people are told, if sotto voce, that a Red army which a few weeks ago was said to be smashing its way across the "waist" of Finland has had to withdraw almost to the border.

Totalitarian governments have learned to do marvels with propaganda. They have succeeded in temporarily making their people believe that white is black and black white. But even the most regimented subjects of the most ruthless of dictators cannot long be made to believe that what the Red army has experienced in Finland is a "victory."

They Can Take It

Neville Chamberlain knows his people. He knows that they are prone to grumble and difficult to move from their habitual ways. And when he prophesies dark days ahead, as he did most frankly in his broadcast on Tuesday night, it is with realization that nothing short of necessity will ever force the easy-going English character to full exertion.

This necessity, the Prime Minister told his listeners, now confronts Great Britain. The war, he said in effect, has only just begun. A phase of it "much grimmer than anything we have seen yet" is drawing nearer. And this applies not alone to the casualties and material destruction to be anticipated, but also to economic and financial burdens from which no Englishman can expect to remain immune.

Thus Mr. Chamberlain, in his first public address this year, sounds a threefold warning which reaches to every element in the population. Those with investments are informed that direct taxation "already so heavy as almost to constitute conscription of wealth" may be further increased. Those whose business is active with war orders are told that the government has no intention of letting them hold onto any excess profits. And those who work for wages are advised to abandon the idea that their incomes will automatically increase as and when the cost of living rises. Privation and self-sacrifice, the Prime Minister says, is the road ahead for every Englishman.

It is not easy, in a democracy, to paint so realistic and stark a picture of the future. Statesmen who stand or fall on popular support are much more likely to emphasize cheerful hopes and to play down all evidence of a gloomy or displeasing character. It is the more of a tribute to Neville Chamberlain, therefore, that he has not hesitated to point out the shadows which lie across the path of every British subject.

The Prime Minister is certain that his people "are united in their determination to win this war and to put an end to the spirit which dominates German policy." He is not so certain that "they understand what they are up against." But he is not afraid to tell them about it.

Democracy is functioning at its best when elected officers dare to give the voters the unvarnished truth, without minimizing the dangers of the situation, without concealing sacrifices which are inevitable. Mr. Chamberlain in this courageous speech has further demonstrated his stature as a leader. And there is every reason to anticipate that his people will as fully justify the implicit faith he has in their determination to "carry on," regardless of the cost.

Progress Toward Health

The entire community, along with Dr. Ruhland, will be gratified over the improved health conditions in 1939 to which he has called attention. Since Washington awakened, a few years ago, to the fact of its abominable health record, definite progress has been made. As Dr. Ruhland notes, the city is now "clearly ridding itself of the adverse reputation which it has long held" in this respect.

Infant and maternal mortality rates were notably lowered last year. Pneumonia suffered a truly remarkable setback. Tuberculosis yielded, in some measure, to the determined efforts of the Health Department and other agencies, although it is still an unnecessary menace for many Washingtonians. A few deaths were recorded locally for diseases such as diphtheria, which, as Dr. Ruhland says, should now be nonexistent.

While this statement from the Health Department is gratifying, it should be clearly recognized as being merely a "progress" report. It reflects only a good start toward making Washington a really healthy city. Dr. Ruhland has done excellent work with the resources at his command. His effective demonstration of the fact that public health, within certain limits, can be purchased should serve to strengthen the demand for more extensive efforts.

"For President"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers for the man who signs himself an "Observer" and suggests the name of James W. Wadsworth, of New York, for Presidential candidate on the Republican ticket! He describes himself as a Delaware Republican. I happen to be a Virginia Democrat, but I heartily agree with his observation.

Indeed, I agreed to such an extent that when I heard James Wadsworth speak on the floor of the House during the neutrality fight I went about inquiring of the guards, people who sat near me, well-disposed-looking people in the corridors, who that man might be. Nobody knew. A few days later I looked it up in the Congressional Record and found out.

Then I turned to my typewriter and wrote a few of the columnists telling them of my find. Yes, very naive, but what with the wheelhorses being pushed around, the old men and the youngsters, I was beginning to feel sorry for the Republicans and thought they needed help from an "observer." Here was a man who could speak for himself, once he was placed before the people.

But why do I, being a Democrat, take the trouble to call attention to James Wadsworth? I believe in the two-party system. That's why. I don't like to see one party overbalance the other to the extent it has been doing in recent years.

Why don't the Republicans hunt hard till they find a real man like this one? "A small man placed on a pedestal is all the smaller because of the elevation." But a big man so placed finds the opportunity to show his size and make the pedestal disappear.

Riddle's Answer?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today's headlines express disappointment that the President failed to disclose his third-term intentions in his Jackson Day "plate side chat."

Possibly the President disclosed the answer to this riddle in the last paragraph of his talk. After listing certain qualities that must be possessed by the Nation's leaders he added this humorous but revealing statement—

But remember that they must have other qualities—the willingness to pay $100 for a $10 dinner, the fortitude to eat the whole of it, and the courage to make a half-hour plate-side chat at the end of it.

F. D. R. was the only one who made a plate-side chat at a $100 Jackson Day dinner on the evening of January 8, 1940.

JOHN McGRATH.
Washington, Jan. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In picking up my Post this morning, I was amazed at the headlines: "Jackson Day Diners Hear Plea For Unity, But No Word on '40 Plans of President."

Can it be possible that you or your staff or those present did not get the plain inference of the President's closing paragraph?

Nightfall On The Desert

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The day goes down. The far, far stretch of sands fades into somber gray. A silence broods above this barren waste of solitudes, and things long dead still haunt these dreary lands. Against the glow of moonrise dimly stands a range of hills in monolithic nudes; the coyotes cry—the desert's interludes—and winging night spreads out her shadowy hands. FREDERICK FARRELL.
Washington, Jan. 8.

The Deluge?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Quite naturally the President enjoys telling the Nation and party leaders about the job that has been done, the progress made during the past seven years. His analogies were nice word pictures which lifted hearers from realities and made us all wish with him his accomplishments would stand the test of time.

Convincing aptness in presentation is a virtue in leadership. Few Presidents in office have had the daring to so blithely compare their work with that of great men of the past.

I suspect the most convincing proof of Administration failure is the notable lack of New Deal candidates to take over the work—there are none that Roosevelt seems sure of, which is perhaps the best reason he is undecided about the third term. The President is the New Deal; there is really no other.

Strangely, too, left-wing supporters who are naturally Presidential timber are none too enthusiastic about the prospect of carrying on. They are much like a social group of fun makers entertained by one who pays all the bills while his money lasts. When the party ends no one takes over and continues it.

So we see the passing of the New Deal. Soon we will begin to face the realities sprung from seven years of spiritual regeneration.

Medal For Jennings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent columns in The Washington papers carried news of bestowal of distinguished service medal (year 1939) by the Cosmopolitan Club of this city on the great soul and person of Coleman Jennings.

May the writer, through your columns, express commendation and congratulation to the Cosmopolitan Club, which in this significant action, bestows additional prestige upon itself.

It was a source of considerable anguish to the writer that during one of the several years in which the late Clarence Phelps Dodge slaved for the all-inclusive Washington Community Chest that the distinguished medal committee of the Cosmopolitan Club was unable to perceive a person upon whom to bestow their honor.

Now by recognition of the present incumbent, Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Community Chest and of the same spiritual stature as Mr. Phelps, that error of omission, has in the opinion of the writer been somewhat washed out. Congratulations, it seems, are in order all around.

JOSEPH D. KAUFMAN.

"Most Amusing"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the letters that appear in your "Letters to the Editor" column, I find that the most amusing and entertaining ones are submitted by Stalin's little angels"—the Communists.

After reading the literary masterpiece in The Post of January 6, written by Comrade C. Gilbert, who signs himself the "educational director" of the Communist Party in our city, I'm convinced that he erred in sending his letter to this column—it should have been sent to Mr. H. I. Phillips.

LOWELL H. MORAN.

Pathetic Reverberation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An echo from the antique past finds space to reverberate pathetically in your issue of December 31. One Lee Meltzer, national secretary, Social Democratic Federation, U. S. A., takes Soviet Russia and the Communist Party to task, using Walter Lippmann as his springboard.

I am doubtful that the Communists, in whose behalf I speak with their solicitation, will judge it necessary to reply to Mr. Meltzer, for unlike Mr. Meltzer they are not exclusively preoccupied with consideration of abstract theory and the inverted defense of capitalism by verbal confusion.

No, the Communists, both here and abroad, are too busy defending and extending the rights of the people; helping to raise the standards of the working class, of which they are a part; and sacrificing their comfort, liberty and often their lives for the building of the "World of Tomorrow."

It is clear to see that it is the Communists who are the real defenders of peace and the rights of the people. The reactionary war makers in France find it necessary to suppress the Communist Party; the Fascists in Germany, Italy and Spain behead thousands of Communists, and the Wall Street forces in America, who want to drive down the wages of American workers, destroy the trade union movement, scrap the New Deal program and drive America into war, prosecute Communist leaders.

FELLOW TRAVELER.
Washington, Jan. 8.

Feed The Birds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While the snow is on the ground let's not forget to feed the birds. Few sights are more enjoyable than to see the half-starved little flying folks come hungrily winging their way to a meal and it inflates your ego in a surprisingly short time!

They are brave to have stayed the winter through with us. They didn't have to do it, for they could easily have gone South with the Smith-Gordons and the Joneses, but there must be a bit of adventure or romance in them for wanting to stay around where the smoke drifts out of chimneys in the winter-time—or maybe its just faith in us, so let's not disappoint them.

Did you ever think how doubly, how awfully, still the snow would be without any birds about? Or that we, ourselves would probably starve without the birds? If one robin can eat 12 feet of angleworms in one day, how many fruit and garden pests do the birds destroy for us? Enough, we are told, to make the difference between life and starvation. And if the birds find food at your door a few times they will come to depend on you so don't let them down.

CLARA LOUISE JOHN.

The Palestine Question

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be regretted, many of us think, that just now, when the British are leading the fight against the archenemy of the Jews, Hitler, and are trying to rehabilitate Poland, where so many Jews have been dislodged, not to speak of the outstanding services which England has rendered the Jewish people, that at this critical moment American Jewish leaders should once again press the Palestine question on the public.

The Jewish question in its relation to Palestine has been threshed out and gone over ad nauseam. The British propose to do the only thing they can do for the best ends of all concerned.

Cannot the Palestine question be shelved for the time so that conciliation and the much-talked-of tolerance may rule in the earth?

The Post Impressionist

A Committee of Women

We sat on the balcony of the Bontoc Inn and looked at the main street of the village. Old Tio Jones, resident of those remote Philippine mountains since the days of '98, watched the scene below.

"Yes, the street looks just about like the one I left back home." He smiled at me. "The people look different, though, don't they?"

I looked at the brown bodies of Bontoc warriors, uncovered but for the G-string, but not unarmed, and wondered how the Main-streeters back home would react to men passing up and down with spears and head axes ready for use.

"They look different, but they're not so different, after all, and their women have minds of their own, too." He laughed. "Did you ever hear about the engineer the women ran out of these mountains? Nothing rough—just a committee of women using a little tact and strategy." He told me the story.

A young white engineer in the Philippines not long ago decided to leave the fashionable and beautiful mountain resort of Baguio, in the vicinity of which many millions in gold have already been mined, and to go farther back into the mountains up near Bontoc, where there are rumored to be more golden millions still unexplored.

Not many tourists get to Bontoc, for the road is pretty narrow and precipitous and the hotel accommodations are not exactly in the Waldorf manner. None of that worried the engineer at all, but he was a bit disturbed by the thought of disputing the right of way with the Bontocs, reputedly the most warlike of the mountain tribes.

Old timers had told him that the Bontocs would not stand for any intrusion in their mountain kingdom except an occasional tourist bringing them matches and buying a spear or head ax. They weren't going to have their mountain trails ruined by gold mines.

The engineer visited the Philippine Constabulary headquarters in the village of Bontoc and asked for a guard, which was courteously granted him. Feeling more secure with his well-armed young Filipino constabularies, he went forth to explore. They hiked all day through beautiful hardwood forests and pitched camp that night on a high mountain.

At first the engineer slept soundly, then fitfully, as he dreamed of the wealth that the morrow might bring. As he finished dressing the next morning he sensed a strange uneasiness, a feeling that someone was watching him. He stepped outside his little tent, and there stood before him a large crowd of Bontoc women—several hundred of them.

He looked at their brown stolid faces, dark expressionless eyes, and dearth of clothing, for they wore nothing above the waist and very short skirts below. If they didn't resemble their American sisters, their purpose was the same, their determination was more grim, and they were untroubled by some of the inhibitions imposed on us by what we call civilization.

The engineer looked over the women's heads to a distant hillside which glittered in the morning sun. In fact it glittered amazingly. He looked closer. Against the green of the trees he saw brown bodies, and the glittering forest was one of steel spear points as hundreds of Bontoc warriors, well armed, stood motionless watching their committee of women deal with the intruder. So the Bontocs, too, had heard about diplomatic envoys backed by a good strong armed force.

The engineer looked at his little band of Filipino constabularies, six strong, armed with rifles it was true, six rifles against hundreds of Bontoc spears. This was the twentieth century, but perhaps the Bontocs hadn't heard of it and didn't know the rules and refinements of modern combat.

The brown skins of his Filipino guard looked pale as the women closed in about them. Words were futile, for how many of those Bontoc women had heard English? Furthermore, they had no desire to hear it, were determined not to hear it. One group took charge of the Philippine constabulary, another of the engineer. The distant spearpoints shifted a little—just the suggestion of an advance.

Quietly and effectively the women disarmed the soldiers. Quietly and effectively they removed the engineer's heavy mountain boots and socks and left him barefoot and also unarmed. After all, if he was going to roam those mountains, he must do it after the native fashion in his bare feet. No Bontoc wore shoes.

The engineer looked about him as the women moved down the mountain to rejoin their warriors. In vain he longed for the sight of a horse, even a nice little Filipino one such as those that trot so gallantly about the streets of Manila. But he was far from Manila and his tender feet were the only available means of retreat.

Slowly he turned his face toward the village of Bontoc. The Filipinos favored haste, for they did not trust those mountain warriors, but haste without shoes was out of the question. The mountain side was steep and rocky. He regarded it thoughtfully, but thought was abandoned and only feeling was left. Sharp rocks tore the flesh. Civilization couldn't take it.

The nightmare finally ended. The Filipino soldiers slunk into constabulary headquarters late the second night and found that their arms had been turned in to headquarters that morning by the committee of Bontoc women. The engineer spent some thoughtful days in bed with bandaged feet.

Old Tio Jones laughed as the story was ended.

"I guess that engineer is content to leave Bontoc for the Bontocs, and I dare say he won't ever trifle with their women. These Bontocs can turn out a pretty effective committee of women."

All-American Sport

WE-ALL BABY-HAVIN', 'taterhoin,' God-fearin' Americans are not a-goin' to take kindly to the abandonment of intercollegiate football by the University of Chicago.

If there is anything a little more American than anything else it is intercollegiate football, and this decision to haul down the grand old flag, so to speak, looks like the work of the dirty Communists. I would not be surprised to learn that it was inspired and engineered by the same cunning plotters who seduced that illustrious, stall-walking, intellectual alumnus of the Midway, Mr. James Vincent Sheean, to sign a manifesto exculpating Moscow, just before Josef Stalin took a full swing at Finland and missed.

In speaking of Finland the adjectives "brave," "poor" and "glorious" are to be taken for granted. I call Finland Finland for short only to save tolls.

Some Mental Scrimmage Under Old Man Hutchins

THE TROUBLE with the University of Chicago is that the students have gone in too much for high-pressure thinking. I once sat in on an evening of mental scrimmage there under the direction of Head Coach Robert M. Hutchins, the grand old man of ratiocination, and it was easy to see that this was a killing game for young and immature minds. They would read a passage c of an old thought-book, and the grand old man, or wizard mentor, of ratiocination would call on one member of the squad to tell what this thought meant.

That was not so bad. That was just straight-away, longshoreman's thinking. But when they would ask the student to tell what it meant sideways, backward and upside down, and before the poor kid was excused for his shower and rub they would have him doing half-gainers, spinners and standing-sitting jack-knives over some proposition that never should have been given a second thought.

The Thinking Left Many Of 'Em Groggy

THE THINKING squad staggered out of the room groggy, and it is no wonder that so many letter-men and women of the thinking squad left U. of C. with cerebral trick-knees and thought with a decided limp in after life, especially on rainy days.

Some veterans of intercollegiate football write an annual magazine piece, usually entitled "Was It Worth It?" in which they take occasion to remind a forgetful public that they really were all-Americans long ago. They then dig up all the old cases of charley horses, twig-fracture and cauliflowered cerebellum that have occurred in football in a quarter-century and cry "No" a thousand times.

They were young and dumb at the time, and they thought the glory, the varsity letters and clippings which they accumulated were worth the risks and hurts. Now, however, they are wiser, and so they decry football, but they, nevertheless, preserve as priceless trophies to be handed on to their sons, if any, the dusty helmets and cracked old football shoes which they wore on the varsity and their football letters and scrapbooks. They do this in the identical spirit of those retired brigadiers whose only distinction was earned in war and who delighted in war but now decry it as a beastly business, yet cherish their medals and brittle old citations from the commanding officer.

No Communist Ever Made All-America

MUCH THAT PASSES for college thinking in reality is nothing but worrying, and the graduates of the schools which produce good football teams are quite as happy and as useful for all practical and spiritual purposes as the furrowed and thought-scarred veterans who are emerging from the University of Chicago. The European schools have always emphasized thinking, and the result is told not in progress or happiness but in the war news today.

In this country the University of Wisconsin, Chicago and the City of New York are proud of their indifference to football and noted in equal parts for their feebleness at the game and the number of perambulating headaches which they have inflicted on the Nation.

No Communist ever made all-America or even earned a varsity letter, and the memoirs of the college Communists show that they all are misfits and much disliked in school and plainly suggest that the males were jealous of the campus hero and the females jealous of the cutie with the swell pair of legs who strutted with the band between halves.

A Road To Peace

By Livingston Hartley

The Hope Of Federation

Special Correspondence of The Post.

AMID ALL the fears for the future which the European war has unleashed, there shines one bright beacon of hope. That is the movement for a new Europe based upon the principle of federation, a movement which appears to gain in influence with every passing week.

Federation promises Europe a comprehensive cure for the political and economic ills which have made the '30s a downward spiral into disaster. It holds out an answer to depression aggravated by war costs through the leveling of customs barriers and the creation of a huge free market. Because it must be built upon a failure of Nazi Germany's war upon the west, it implies a decisive set-back of the totalitarian march upon civilization. And it presages, within the area it covers, an end to international war through the pooling of control over national armaments.

But the obstacles which bar any general approach to such a new Europe appear almost insurmountable. Any effort to weld the 25 states west of Russia into a federation must be postponed until after peace has been restored, and such postponement cannot but create new conditions prejudicial to its success.

THE ECONOMIC life of the belligerents, for example, must be expected to seek to return to the old channels as soon as hostilities cease, thereby making a customs union far more damaging to national economics and private interests than it would be under existing systems of wartime control.

Allies, moreover, will inevitably tend to drift apart once the war is over and the pressure for community of effort relaxed. And their peoples will be liable, as our own experience of 1919 indicates, to undergo a reaction against the self-sacrificing spirit of wartime, which will impede further national effort requiring new sacrifices for future benefit.

Consideration of these obstacles suggests another road to federation. It suggests that the present war both opens such a road and provides the opportunity to advance along it.

THE PEOPLES now involved in the war comprise the principal elements of power and civilization in Europe. France, Germany, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria alone form a contiguous block of 170,000,000 people, to which the colonies of France would add 69,000,000 more. Within their borders are four-fifths of the Rhine and about one-third of the Danube, and they produce more than four-fifths of the coal and steel of all continental Europe.

If these peoples could be brought by agreement within a common political and economic framework, a sturdy foundation for a more extensive European federation would be laid. The foundation would be far sturdier if the British could go in with them, but, if that were impossible, it could be powerfully reinforced by British support. Other peoples could join such a limited federation as their own self-interest drove them to do so, and future growth could be left to natural evolution.

THE BELLIGERENT peoples, moreover, have in prospect during this war an opportunity to create such a federation which will be lost after peace has been restored. This opportunity will come if it once becomes evident to all of them that the Allies are going to win the war.

Neither the Germans nor the peoples they have subjected could hold out against federation in these circumstances. The Germans would not be likely to hold out long if their only alternative was a hopeless struggle, final defeat, and a disastrous peace. And the Czechs, Poles and Austrians, because their fate now depends upon the Allies, could be brought in as a condition of liberation. Thus the evident approach of an Allied victory, can be used, if the Allies should so decide, to make federation a reality in the heart of Europe. And, once victory is on the horizon, acceptance of this goal as a war aim would appear to offer the Allies the shortest road to a satisfactory peace.

No satisfactory peace appears possible now until a new German government replaces the Nazis. Obviously, the downfall of the Nazi regime can best be brought about by assuring the German people that its overthrow will be to their own advantage. Since an Allied offer of inclusion in a federation would promise them a far better future than any other settlement they could hope to extract from defeat, it would give them this assurance.

A FURTHER requirement for peace along these lines would be some concrete guarantees that a new German government would honor its word and that its will would be respected by the German army. To secure such guarantees it might prove necessary to place a large proportion of Germany's striking weapons under Allied or neutral control and to constitute the first armed forces of the federation on a preponderantly non-German basis. Measures of this nature would, of course, cause bitterness in the Reich. But bitterness is a natural consequence of failure in war, and, in this case, might soon be allayed by the practical benefits of federation.

Because they inhabit the industrial heart of Europe, the Germans might expect to gain more proportionately in material welfare from federation than any other people. In return for relinquishing dreams of political domination, they would acquire an economic "living space" they have so far sought in vain, as well as insurance against a new subjection beneath despotic leaders.

All other peoples of the federation would gain not only in economic prosperity, but also in the permanent liquidation of the persistent German menace to Europe. By including the Germans within a larger political entity which would control their armaments as well as those of their neighbors, they would answer conclusively the German question which has brought war to Europe twice in one generation. For the Czechs, Poles and Austrians, this appears to be the only peace settlement which can provide permanent safeguards against German attack or domination.

FOR THE FRENCH, such a peace would entail definite sacrifices, not only of the temporary political hegemony which a "knock-out" victory might bring, but also through the prospect that the Germans might acquire within the federation an economic position superior to their own.

On the other hand, they would attain their fundamental national goal, a permanent security against a Germany constantly increasing in relative manpower which no other peace appears able to guarantee. And by including their colonial possessions in the federation, they might claim a political voice in its government superior to that of the Germans.

Whether the British, as head of a world-wide commonwealth and empire, could participate in such a federation cannot be foreseen. It is possible that their relationship with it, in the initial stage at any rate, could not go beyond close political cooperation and special economic ties. But its creation would bring them vast advantages, among which would be an opportunity for enduring national and imperial security they could not hope for in a new Europe divided like the old, the extinction of the German and totalitarian threats, and a far more prosperous continent with which to trade. They could also expect that the subsequent evolution of Europe, the commonwealth and the empire would eventually permit them, if they chose to do so, to join the federation.

ANY FEDERATION which includes both the French and the Germans presages a new era for Europe. It promises to stabilize peace in the heart of the continent, to end the totalitarian menace to the west, to block both Russia and communism from further advance into Europe and to contribute powerfully to world economic recovery. But, like any other great advance in human progress, it must surmount enormous obstacles, not least of which would be the opposition of powerful elements in England and France who have not yet been taught by this war the unlearned lesson of the last—namely, that if politics continues to block economic forces in crowded Europe, recurrent explosions are bound to take place.

The suggestion that the European peoples facing each other in battle or cowed by each other's police should seek peace by federation may seem extravagant now. But there is one reason why, as the war progresses in cost, this solution may appear more practicable. That is because it offers not only a solid foundation for future peace, but also the best way to end the present war.

New Tariff Battle

By Mark Sullivan

The "Reciprocal Trade Pacts"

WE ARE ABOUT to have a battle in Congress on what is officially known as "reciprocal trade agreements" — abbreviated, by newspaper condensation, I suppose, to "Hull trade pacts." It is expected to be the greatest battle in this Congress. Facing the job of clarifying the issues involved—and therefore the work of first understanding them myself—I pored for a forenoon over official documents, pamphlets, copies of speeches.

Then, a little dismayed, I pushed the documents away from me, and picked up today's newspaper. I read the column of Gen. Hugh Johnson. I found the General had been engaged in the same job as myself. And I found the General, as the saying is, "taking the words out of my mouth." I found him confessing to readers: "The issues are so technical that I shrink from the task of making them plain."

We can make a little progress by saying that the term "trade pacts" means much the same as "tariff." At least, for the purpose of the coming Congressional debate, the two terms are the same. What we are going to have is a debate on the tariff.

For more than a hundred years the United States has had tariffs. Every decade or so we wrote new ones—in 50 years we have written five, the last in 1931, the Smoot-Hawley tariff.

General Revision Was The Old Way

THE WAY of writing a new tariff has been, in the past, to do it wholesale. The process was called "general revision." It was done as a single thing, in one omnibus bill. All the rates on all commodities were thrown into one pot—a bill containing thousands of separate rates. Congress debated it for months, debated amendments to it, raised some proposed rates, lowered others. Then Congress passed it. It, and each of the rates in it, remained in effect until the next general revision, several years later. That way of making tariffs came to be regarded as inflexible.

In 1934, after Mr. Hull became Secretary of State, something quite new was introduced. Mr. Hull was given power to make reciprocal trade agreements with other countries. He could agree with France, for example, to reduce the American tariff on French lace—provided France would make a corresponding concession on ar. American commodity, perhaps agree to permit more American wheat to be sold in France. Mr. Hull negotiated such agreements with 22 nations, covering a large number of commodities.

But, automatically, these agreements became much more than separate agreements between two nations. They became universal. For there is a provision of international law called the "most favored nation" rule. Under this rule, if we grant a lower rate to any one nation, the same rate becomes applicable to all nations that follow the rule, practically all in the world.

Pact With One Nation Becomes 'Universal'

CONSEQUENTLY, when we lowered the rate on lace from France, for example, we lowered the rate on lace from practically every country. Similarly, when France or another nation granted a concession on American wheat, for example, it had to grant the same concession on wheat from other countries. A trade pact with one nation automatically became a pact with the world, applying to every commodity named in the pact.

So that, in effect, these Hull trade pacts are not separate agreements with 22 individual nations. They amount to a world-wide reduction of tariffs between all nations. In some cases, a lowered tariff wall between the United States and Britain may result ultimately in a lowered tariff wall between Spain and France.

This broad, world-wide effect of the Hull trade pacts is claimed as perhaps the most important fruit of Mr. Hull's policy. The effect everywhere, between all nations, is to reduce tariffs, to break down the "quotas" by which some nations limit imports and exports, to get away from exchange restrictions—in short to increase the flow of international trade everywhere. This effect is believed to be a remedy for the root of most of the world's ills. The argument is phrased clearly by Miss Dorothy Thompson:

Hull Faces Battle In Power Renewal

"I BELIEVE that a majority of the world's ablest economists would agree that the most serious single cause of present-day unemployment, dictatorship, unrest, excessive armament and drift toward war is the attempt of ever-increasing numbers of sovereign states to shut themselves up in geographical compartments, separated from other nations by tariffs, embargoes, unbalanced indebtedness and fluctuating currencies."

That is what the Hull trade pacts are supposed to remedy. If they do, we benefit. In any world-wide restoration of international trade, and therefore of economic contentment, and therefore of peace, the United States, of course, would share.

Aside from our sharing in that universal benefit, consider the Hull trade pacts as they apply directly to the United States. From our point of view, the Hull pacts seem to have these effects:

They are a way of reducing our tariff rates partially and gradually, a few at a time. They accomplish this with the least detriment to American industry. For Mr. Hull and his experts try to pick out for their trade pacts the particular commodities upon which tariffs can be reduced without serious effect upon American producers.

But, inevitably, some of our producers and some localities feel their industries are hurt, or fear they will be. From this arises the opposition, and the coming battle in Congress. Mr. Hull's power to makes these pacts expires June 12 next. The debate is on whether the power should be renewed for another three years.

Today And Tomorrow

The Dies Committee

THE DIES COMMITTEE was created by the House of Representatives on May 26, 1938, to investigate subversive and un-American propaganda and "all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation." After working for a year and a half the committee have just reported to Congress that they do not "think the investigation has proceeded far enough to justify us in recommending legislation to Congress. We need and can secure much more information not only from sections of the country that we have investigated but also from the larger areas that we have not even touched before recommending legislation to Congress. Even after we are supplied with full and complete information and facts, several months of consideration must be devoted to the question of legislation. This will require expert assistance and thorough research."

So the committee asks for another two years of life and an appropriation of at least $150,000.

It is evident, however, that the committee do not put much faith in the legislation that they may eventually recommend. On page 13 of their report they state that "Congress does not have the power to deny to citizens the right to believe in, teach, or advocate, communism, fascism and naziism." Thus the committee are precluded from recommending legislation which would prohibit citizens, Mr. Earl Browder and Mr. Fritz Kuhn for example, from conducting un-American and subversive propaganda.

Body Is Reluctant To Ask Legislation

WHAT SORT of legislation, then, can the committee eventually recommend? The committee hold that, in principle, they can recommend legislation to deport aliens who conduct such propaganda. They hold that Congress could, in principle, outlaw any organization found to be under the control or dictation of a foreign government, as for example the Communist Party and the bund; or that Congress could require such organizations to make a public disclosure of their membership and their funds. But the committee are not ready to suggest legislation of this sort.

This reluctance to recommend legislation is the crux of the matter. The reluctance arises, we may suppose, from a realization on the part of the committee that legislation of this character would be extremely difficult to enforce. But more than that, the kind of legislation which Congress has power to enact could not get at the real problem which their investigation has disclosed. For the essential thing about these subversive movements is that their directing chiefs and the true believers feel bound by no rule of law or morals; there is no form of subterfuge, concealment, or perjury which they do not feel fanatically entitled to employ.

The naive may shut their eyes to this. But it is the quintessence of the whole problem. For even supposing that within the framework of the Constitution it were possible to frame and enact a law against these revolutionary conspiracies, the prosecuting officers, the juries and the judges would not convict without legal evidence that would be extremely difficult to obtain. The case of Al Capone, convicted as I remember not for his real offenses against society but for income tax evasion, or the case of Fritz Kuhn convicted for a petty offense against his own followers and dupes, shows how difficult it is to legislate, detect, prosecute, and convict members of the organized underworld. By their absolute and total lawlessness they elude, much more readily than other men, the clutches of the law.

They Put Their Faith In Publicity Glare

THAT IS THE REASON, I take it, why the committees are so half-hearted about legislation, and why they wish to continue "investigating" rather than to begin legislating. Although they do not say so plainly in their official report, it is, I think, evident that the remedy in which they put their faith is what they call (on page 13) "the right to focus the spotlight of publicity" upon revolutionary activity. In other words, the remedy is not in what the Dies Committee will eventually recommend to Congress but in what the Dies Committee are now exposing in the newspapers.

The Dies Committee are not really a legislative committee. They are a kind of committee of public safety set up by Congress to suppress activities which, though detested by the great majority of the people, are in themselves either not unlawful, or, even if they were outlawed, could not be dealt with by the ordinary procedure of the law. The Dies Commitee are official vigilantes operating in an area, that of the political underworld, where there is as yet no effective law and there is, therefore, no order. The committeemen, like their vigilante predecessors on the American frontier, are therefore themselves often lawless in spirit and disorderly in their methods.

This accounts for the somewhat shamefaced approval which thoughtful men have given to the work of the committee. The public is confronted with the ancient moral question of whether the end justifies the means. Thus, only the very innocent and self-deluding have any doubt that the Dies Committee have been attacking a formidable evil in modern society. The menace is real. It is not imaginary. And it must be met. Yet there is no doubt also that the procedure of the Dies Committee is itself a violation of American morality: it is a pillory in which reputations are ruined, often without proof and always without the legal safeguards that protect the ordinary criminal; it is a tribunal before which men are arraigned and charged with acts that are, as a matter of fact, lawful.

End Is Attained By Deplorable Means

THEREFORE, the end, which is to protect the American system, is attained by means which, if used for some other end, would be deplored by everyone, by everyone, except of course the revolutionists whom Mr. Dies is stalking.

It is plain that the Dies Committee cannot be abolished and must be continued since it offers a center of resistance to evils which could not otherwise be brought to light and checked. It is equally plain that the committee needs to be reformed, so that its methods will in spirit, at least, be lawful, and, therefore, capable of commanding the respect of law-abiding citizens.

I do not know how this can be done except by subjecting the procedure of the committee to public criticism, and by adding to the membership one or two learned and respected lawyers who will make it their business to reform the procedure, and by giving the committee enough money to hire competent investigators so that they may cease to rely upon dubious informers and the crackpots who always gather about an inquiry of this sort.

The Once Over

Dizzy Zone Booms

Miami Beach, Jan. 10.

Florida is having such a boom it almost favors a nonstop European war. There are so many people here that a crowd can get lost in a crowd.

Traffic is the index to population. If you find a parking space anywhere near the center in 10 minutes the resort is in a slump. If you find it in 15 minutes things are picking up. If you find it in 20 minutes it's a good season, and if you can't find it at all except beside a hydrant the boom is back. This season you can't find a hydrant.

Not everybody who usually goes to Europe or on an ocean cruise has come to Miami, but everybody sent a representative.

So many new hotels and apartment houses have gone up in the last year that there will be no room shortage, but private homes are going at a premium. Even natives who are far from hard up are renting their own homes at from $2,000 to $6,000. A waterfront millionaire leased his villa to a visiting millionaire the other day for no other reason than that he wanted to prove his contention that the other fellow had no business sense.

What was away up town three seasons ago is midtown today. The bizarre building trend has struck even the fire department. Two of the smartest looking structures in Miami Beach, with doric pillars, huge porches, Venetian blinds, fancy draperies and pink furniture are (believe it or not) hose company headquarters. Visitors don't believe it. Imagine a city where they get an interior decorator to give a firehouse the right touch!

And the result is confusing! I went to a firehouse the other day thinking it was the home of a man who was throwing a cocktail party. And a friend of mine rushed into a private home to report a fire.

One of the largest islands at the beach end of Venetian Causeway has been cleared of all buildings and a vast apartment house unit erected. The Government has nothing to do with it, but it covers so much territory that some people refer to it as a "Housing Project for Low Cost Loafing."

Tropical Park had its biggest season. The horses were much faster there. They used to travel from the paddock to the starting gate in 11 minutes. This year they do it in 11 minutes 50 seconds.

Nothing is called a home here any more. It is either a casa or a manor. And that gag about a restaurant being opened whenever two Greeks meet needs revision. Whenever two waiters meet here they open three restaurants.

Okay, Hen!

"I think businessmen would be better off if they had no private offices. I never had one in my life."—Henry Ford. We second the motion. A private office is an office in which a lack of privacy is guaranteed. Ask any man with a private office what he does and he will admit that when he isn't trying to get rid of some caller who got in by mistake he is trying to figure out a way to avoid seeing the fellow with whom he was foolish enough to make an appointment.

District's Extensive Public Works Program at Its Height

STEEL WORK rises for the East Administration Building of the new Municipal Center which, when completed, will cost $5,700,000. Original plans called for one larger building, running across John Marshall place to Fifth street, but members of the Park and Planning Commission voted to retain the vista along John Marshall place to the courthouse

A duplicate of the Court of Appeals Building, the lower court building will cost $550,000. The Municipal Court structure, being built at a cost of $1,500,000, is patterned after the new Police Court Building

THE DISTRICT'S $18,150,000 Public Works program has entered its last lap with full steam ahead the order of the day so all projects can be finished by July 1.

With most of the major construction projects completed with the exception of the Municipal Center and the Rock Creek diversion sewers, contractors are moving along rapidly, in many instances ahead of schedule, and expect to finish by that time.

Structures completed are: Municipal Court, Juvenile Court, Gallinger Ward Buildings Nos. 3 and 4, Central Heating Plant, District Jail additions, Hospital and Administration Buildings at District Training School at Laurel, Md., Fire Alarm Headquarters and the District Morgue.

The interior of these buildings, with the exception of the Morgue, are yet to be completed. Most of this work, however, will be finished by March 1.

Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner in charge of the projects, said the District had spent $2,500 to install a bulkhead at the Belmont street portal to eliminate the noise of dynamiting. The bulkhead, made of concrete, is about 15 feet high and measures about 4 feet in width at the base, tapering off to about 30 inches at the top. A heavy timber door is attached and is closed before blasting.

Two wings of the jail have been completed and an inspection yesterday revealed each cell is equipped with air-conditioning, individual sanitary fixtures and plenty of light. Just as soon as the interiors are finished the inmates will be moved in and the main building renovated.

The Municipal Center project will run about $5,700,000; Hospital and Jail Buildings, $2,925,000; public schools, $1,038,000; fire alarm system, $530,000; sewer program, $5,377,000; water and sewer facilities at Lorton, Va., $270,000; Laurel, Md., work, $260,000.

Those Experienced in Deafness Turn Thumbs Down On "Dead Giveaway" of Solicitous Interpreter

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was enormously interested in "Traveller's" letter (and your admirable reply) published January 6. It would seem that among your many sources of knowledge, you have had opportunity to participate in the experience of the hard-of-hearing person, since the advice you gave this "timid soul" could not have been based on hearsay.

Evidently this woman—who shrinks from the prospect of going alone to a mountain resort for winter sports—has not been deaf for many years; or else she had been unduly sheltered and protected during the period of her deafness. Despite the fact that she is a self supporting business woman, who has worked in a Government office for three years, she has not as yet made a good social adjustment to her handicap, or she would not feel the need of a "constant companion" to act as her go-between and buffer in her leisure hours.

She needs to do exactly what you told her to do: namely, go alone into the winter resort atmosphere and project her thoughts and aims outside herself; to get out and ski and toboggan during the day, letting the problem of "how to make conversation with strangers during long winter evenings" solve itself as it arises. Skiing is one sport where a companion is hardly necessary; but if she excels at it, she will not lack for admiring companionship.

Her fear of isolation in case of unforeseen mishap is a dead giveaway. Until now, according to her own admission, she has always had a relative or longtime friend to take care of her, do her telephoning, interpret her to the world, etc. And I should like to say to her—from long experience at being deaf—that she simply doesn't need an interpreter.

In the first years of my deafness, I used to tell Pullman porters and hotel clerks about it, devising elaborate means of communication in case of need. But the need so seldom arose, and the preliminary explanations were so much bother, that I long ago gave them up, except to explain at the desk of the hotel that I cannot hear over the telephone and that messages should be written out. When I need to use the telephone, there is always someone to do it for a small fee; or simply for a smile and thanks.

"Traveler" needs to travel. She needs more contact with other persons who are hard of hearing. I'll wager that she would scorn the suggestion to visit the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing, because of reluctance to identify herself with the handicapped. And yet she is revealing herself as being even more handicapped than the cheerful, busy, self-sufficient individuals who frequent that little organization for the additional social adequacy it gives them. If she would come around just once in a while she would learn a great deal. Sincerely yours, EXPERIENCED.

This Couple Prizes Close Companionship

NEAR MARY HAWORTH: The newlywed wife's letter in your Column of January 7 interests me because the situation she describes, which causes her to anticipate the loss of "glamour" in the relationship, is one which for three years I looked forward to as heaven. Perhaps if "L. W." stops to consider the workaday arrangement of marriages like mine, she will be more content with her own arrangement—in which she works in the same office with her husband and hence sees him 24 hours a day.

My husband and I both hold Civil Service positions. This was our status when we were married more than three years ago in a small Western city. He worked nights during the week, and days on Saturdays and Sundays. I worked the conventional day shift, with Saturday afternoons and Sundays off. We had one or two meals together a week. At the end of a year, we took stock and found that we had not had so much as one-half day off at the same time during the year—except when one of us took annual leave.

We could not attend evening parties or shows together, nor entertain friends, nor take long week-end trips in our car. We could seldom get leave at the same time. Because my honeymoon leave was canceled at the last minute due to unforeseen circumstances, we were married late one evening, drove nearly 200 miles back to our city and I was on duty at the office the following morning at 8 o'clock. Moreover, the customary small town opposition toward a married woman's being employed at the same place as her husband—or, for that matter, being employed at all—kept us in continual hot water.

Our conflicting work schedule continued practically the same, with small variations, for three years. Thus, the day, two months ago, when my husband was given day work, was one of the happiest in my life. Our happiness has continued IN SPITE of our enforced separation—not because there was any GLAMOUR in the arrangement. And we are thrilled with our new chances for continuous companionship and recreation together—the very arrangement which bores "L. W." and fills her with vague apprehension.

In my opinion "L. W." has much to be thankful for—including the fact that since she must work, she has the opportunity to do so. Many school teachers and women in other professions have had to delay marriage indefinitely, or reduce their standard of living almost unbearably, because of strict rules against employment of married women—even those with parents dependent upon them. Let "L. W." think of the hardships of these women when she becomes discontented with the sameness of her days. They would jump at the chance of a marriage under her conditions, and would never miss a little story-book "glamour." Sincerely, HAPPY WIFE.

Newlyweds Need Money Training

One of the most vital factors in a happy marriage is an intelligent money arrangement, according to Bessie Q. Mott, formerly consultant for the National City Bank of New York. Miss Mott rites in January Good Housekeeping that engaged couples and newlyweds who hope to reach the golden wedding celebration should take the money problem seriously.

It is particularly important nowadays for women to understand money and intelligent uses of money. The tendency, as shown in insurance figures, of women to live longer than their husbands makes capable handling of finances an important part of any woman's knowledge.

Tartar Influence for Resorters

This dramatic and unorthodox beach costume was designed by Magda Polivanov, a Russian countess, now making quaint little sun frocks in New York's Greenwich Village. Its most interesting feature is not its abandoned coloring but new oil treatments which the fabric receives to assure absolute color fastness when it is worn to the beach. The apron skirt has a brilliant curlicue and grass border motiff—quite as baroque as the accessories of carved sandals and rubber sponge necklace

'Co-Educational Drinking' Arouses Men Patrons of Bars; They Insist Woman's Place Is Not in the Saloon But at Home

New York, Jan. 9.

MY VENERABLE spouse, Len Hall, came home from a tour of the neighborhood the other day in a black rage, thumping his crutches on the floor, and muttering darkly. I was much alarmed, and after I had made him comfortable in his easy chair, and had given him an aspirin, I demanded gently what was wrong with him.

Alice Hughes

"I have always been a bitter enemy of coeducational drinking in public places, as you know," he said, still boiling faintly. "But I had no idea what terrible things the ladies will do. I thought that my darkest day was the one when I saw a woman place her Pekinese dog on the sacred bar of a fashionable cafe. But I was wrong.

"A few minutes ago I dropped in at my favorite oasis, the one with the red leather stools, for a glass of refreshing limeade and a few words with Neil, my pal in the white coat. And you'll never guess what I saw, to my horror. Ten feet away there was a very attractive young woman who had brought in her pet monkey and had actually placed the primate on the bar. She called him 'Jo-Jo' and fed him about a pound of peanuts while she inhaled a spot of grape juice.

"I think the sight of that creature in the place cured me of something for all time. Hereafter I shall have my limeades at home with you. The monkey's place is the zoo, and a woman's place is not in a saloon but in the home. An so, as far as I am concerned, is man's." I must confess that I sympathized with the dear old fellow's sense of outrage. I think this is a perfect and terrible example of what can go on in the better circles of our strange metropolis.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Meeting Fay Wells, the wife of Linton, well-known newspaper correspondent, I asked after the health of "Snooks," the leopard they brought back from Ethiopia in 1936, and who finally grew so enormous that she had to be given to a zoo. Fay told me that "Snooks" had passed away while having cubs. But the Wells family cannot get along without a wild pet of some sort. So now their local apartment is shared by a rare species of wild fox they brought back from a recent trip to Zanzibar. It's an unfriendly little beast, but Fay says it amuses them. That leopard of theirs used to frighten people half to death when she got so big that she nearly filled the living room of their little apartment in the Chelsea district. Several men took the pledge, after seeing "Snooks" in the home.

I suppose you heard that our much-publicized Brenda Frazier spent New Year's eve in bed, probably resting up from Christmas. She'll complete her rest at Nassau, where her grandma lives. Boy, oh boy! how I'd like to be there myself these days! The holidays were a mite too much for Aunt Alice, this time.

Our great housing development in the dismal Red Hook section of Brooklyn is now filled with 2,545 families in the place. The housewives, most of them refugees from tenements, are in a daze of joy over the electric equipment and other clean and modern touches in the new apartments.

Little Gloria Vanderbilt, who was fought over so bitterly in the courts a few years ago, continues to bloom into one of the prettiest youngsters around town. Of course, she should be lovely, having that mother of hers, Gloria, sr. This is the child's first winter of parties, and the boys are giving her a tremendous rush when the band begins to play.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh has been spending quite a bit of time in our town lately. I saw her on a shopping tour the other day with her mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow. Wonderful girl, that Anne. I certainly wish I could write as she can. "Listen, The Wind" is one of the finest books of the past few years. I firmly believe—as do others.

The Gentler Sex

Woman Without Glamour

When she is confronted by a ritzy friend just as she is pawing through a pile of "seconds" at a basement bargain counter rush.

When she is carrying an umbrella that won't stay neatly shut, and that must be grasped tightly at the top or stuck militantly under the arm.

When she receives guests wearing the one tin curler she has forgotten to remove from that part of her permanent that she "can't do a thing with."

When she is paddling along in galoshes on a rainy day carrying home the shopping parcels that were "too small to be sent."

When she is carrying anything whatever in a paper sack.

The night after a beauty-shop session when she decides not to comb out her new tight-wave set until morning.

When she is attempting to step into the front seat of a motorcar carrying a newspaper, a handbag, a box of cookies, an umbrella and a bundle containing the galoshes she wore to the office in the morning.

When she is wearing a dress that is drawn too tightly over her spare tire above her waistline, or a girdle that rolls at the top or rides up at the bottom, or a circular slip that climbs above her knees under her chiffon dress whenever she sits down, or one that shows on every reflection in a shop window, a duck-tail sag in the back under her seven-eighths length coat, or one that seems just as good as new, but in every line expresses that intangible weariness of last season.

When she finds herself attired in a short skirt at an informal event to which everyone else has come in a long dress, or else resplendent in floor-length attire at a cozy little event at which the others have all dropped in in daytime clothes.

When she is trying to manipulate a large handbag, a cigarette, a pair of gloves, a glass of punch, a shrimp on a toothpick dripping mayonnaise, and a plate containing pigs in blankets, watercress sandwiches, pickled beets, stuffed celery, radish roses, pink potato chips, miniature cream puffs, a chocolate bonbon and some pistachio nuts and at the same time acknowledge the greetings of friends and handle the introductions of the stranger she brought with her.

When she is out on the sidewalk trying to settle the fight that developed between her own and the neighbors' children over who shall ride in Junior's new coaster wagon.

When she stops by her husband's office at the end of a hard day of shopping and taking the children to get shoes and is received by his (seemingly) immaculate and perfectly poised secretary.

When she is downtown on a warm early April day in her old fur coat and winter hat and a two-week-old coiffure and encounters an old schoolmate from her home town.

When she is wearing a hat that she has to hold on to when the wind blows, or one that she knows is definitely unbecoming even though the saleswoman said it was "smart," or one that subtly resembles that of the overstuffed dowager at the next table, or one that is a replica of that worn by the dowdy little woman in the corner, or one that her husband definitely doesn't like or one that she definitely doesn't like and was talked into buying against her better judgment.

Today's Health Talk

No Unusual Strain on Eyes in Viewing Motion Pictures; Right Position Important

Does continued watching of a moving picture strain the eyes?

Authorities do not feel that motion pictures are any more harmful to the eyes than reading; perhaps less so. Our eyes are adapted to watching objects in motion and we do so from the time we are born. The quality of the film, the arrangement of the lighting, the mechanism of the motion and the position of the observer all are important. If the screen picture is clear and distinct, and the screen is arranged so there is no glaring reflection, little strain results. Films are retired from service after a reasonable amount of use and it is well that they are because they become spotted and cracked in continued use.

The position of the observer is very important. If he is too close to the screen, the pictures are blurred and confused, and more strain results.

Is the modern breakfast more efficient than the breakfast of our grandfathers' time?

If our grandfathers or great-grandfathers returned to earth today, it is quite possible that the breakfast which we would serve them would attract as much attention as any other change that they would find. The Anglo-Saxon settlers of this country brought their breakfast ideas from England. They had beefsteak and onions, ham and eggs, pancakes swimming in syrup, doughnuts and pie, and sometimes pork chops. They had to eat these things because the benefits of modern transportation and refrigeration did not bring them fresh foods. The modern energizer of orange juice, toast and coffee, with perhaps a thin slice of bacon and one egg, is a far more efficient meal and makes for better work in the forenoon.

Has treating hernia by injections met with fair success? Do small white spots which appear under the finger nails have a medical significance?

Hernia is treated by injection with success in selected cases. Small white spots under the nails are said to be due to accumulations of air and have no medical significance, either good or bad.

Will you please tell me what causes red spots in the throat and red puffed-up taste buds away back on the tongue?

Answer: Sore tongue is found in anemia, pellagra and many nutritional diseases, or may simply be due to bad teeth.

Maureen O'Hara, Irish born and raised, has gone for a 4-mile tramp before bed ever since she can remember. It's a habit she refuses to break, even though the tramp comes after a hard day's work in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," in which she plays the feminine lead. Maureen claims these hikes are good for the disposition—and the complexion.

Accuracy Helps Make Exercise Easier, Better

Creams, Massages And Oil Help, but They Aren't All

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is a saying that you never appreciate something you get for nothing. Maybe that's what used to be wrong with exercise! Now that women are paying and paying for it, exercise is on the verge of becoming popular!

IDA JEAN KAIN

Every salon has its own system and there are as many varieties as there are brands of cosmetics. But the secret behind them all is scientific accuracy of movement, which is infallible. It even works for you at home—with no charge.

This scientific angle has made exercise more precise and easier. Since all the hit-and-miss part has been eliminated, you don't have to work nearly as hard as you used to do—and you get results faster. In the next few days we'll take up each of the exercise positions and movements which will make you over from head to toe. Why not see what you can do with your figure?

Start With Chin Line

We'll start right now with the chin line.

If you were to go to a beauty and exercise salon, you would be impressed with the importance attached to the chin strap. But a chin strap is only a finishing touch of elegance. It's the exercise that does the work! With a little daily exercise you can keep your chin and throat contours firm and young.

These exercises are simple and there are a number of good ones. The thing to remember at all times—exercising or not—is to hold the head high. And the next is to tense the chin and throat muscles when doing exercises for this area.

You might start by slowly turning the head from side to side, stretching the neck and tensing all the muscles. Then progress by tipping the chin in air as you turn the head.

Relax Muscles Slowly

Or turn your face to the ceiling, tilt the chin in air, chew vigorously, opening the mouth wide, then closing it with a hard upward pull of the lower jaw.

After each exercise the muscles should b relaxed very slowly. You might finish by dashing cold water over the chin and throat.

Those luxury measures so dear to the feminine heart—massage, stimulating creams, warm oil—are like the chin strap: finishing touches. They do help, but exercise to tone the muscles so that they will more fully support the skin to a smooth contour is what really counts. Seven-eighths of the throat column is composed of muscle tissue. You can see why exercise is more important than anything else, including fat padding or the absence of it!

In tomorrow's article we'll give away the secret of beautifying the arms, shoulders and bust.

Closet Contributes To Living Comfort

The closet is one really modern contribution to the convenience of living. For all of us remember the old wardrobe that once presided over every bedroom and many other rooms as well. Since the closet is a fairly new addition to the home scene, it hasn't yet realized half of its possibilities.

When first the closet was thought of, home-makers were so grateful for it that they were content with a few hooks and a hat shelf. The rest of the space looked wonderful just for boxes. But now that we've gotten more used to the idea, we are more critical of how the space is used and more often than not find that a lot of it is being wasted or used inefficiently.

The answer is in closets with drawers, shelves, cubbyholes and compartments, each put there for a purpose. The closet in a man's room shouldn't be the same as that in a woman's room or in a child's room, while the room that's to be shared is still another problem; but to make the most of small space, better take the matter seriously.

Four Cabinet Hostesses Entertain at Tea On Washington's Biggest 'At Home' Day

Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Edison, Miss Perkins and Mrs. Wallace Give Receptions in the Afternoon

By Hope Ridings Miller

THE CAPITAL'S BIGGEST "at home" day thus far this season went on the boards yesterday afternoon when four Cabinet hostesses got out their silver salvers and their best tea sets and entertained at four receptions.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Treasury Secretary, received at her home at 2211 Thirtieth street. A newcomer to the Cabinet ranks, Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, went to the Mayflower Hotel to give her party. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins took over the Sulgrave Club for her reception; and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace greeted her guests in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. All parties were scheduled from 4 to 6 p. m., with the exception of Mrs. Edison's, which took place from 5 to 7.

HOPE R. MILLER

A line of guests extending half way down the Mayflower center lobby for well over two hours indicated before you ever got into the Edison reception that it was to be a mammoth event. If any woman in town missed it, I don't know who she was. One look at the moving mass of women in the Chinese Room where the hostess received, and in the adjoining ballroom, proved that Mrs. Edison knew her business when she selected a big place for her party.

Yet, there were those in the throng who remarked that she had wondered just yesterday morning "if anybody would be there at all." Apparently, all her friends came, and brought all their friends; for few times since I have been in Washington have I seen a bigger turn-out for a Cabinet "at home."

Looking as if she had just posed for a fashion picture, Mrs. Edison had on a floor-length frock of powder blue crepe, made with a short jacket trimmed in gold braid and worn beneath a blue fox cape. An orchid corsage pinned at her waistline further accented the becoming costume.

Naval Aides Add Color to Event

Gold braided Naval aides were stationed at a number of strategic points around the room. Secretary Edison was on hand for the entire party and by the time 6 o'clock rolled around there were plenty of men to keep him company.

Interest revolved around the huge tea table, which was lighted with towering pink tapers and decorated with a massive center bouquet of roses and snapdragons, to match the smaller fruit-draped bouquets at either end. Smaller tea tables were set up around the wall, and persons lucky enough to get chairs there lingered on to enjoy the milling mob that soon entirely filled the room.

A listing of who was there would read too much like the Navy register, the social register and the Congressional directory rolled into one. Coming out of the room, I had the feeling I had seen everybody I had ever met in Washington. Young and old alike, Capital notables were making their calling rounds like nobody's business; and most of those who attended one reception turned up at one or two others before the afternoon was over. Even small Alice Birney Robert, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, did her social duty for the day. In the arms of her mother she went down the receiving line at Mrs. Edison's tea, obediently posed for pictures and then was swept out of the room in a burst of glory.

Debutante Group Among Assistants

Among those alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Harold Stark, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Walter B. Woodson, Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. Herbert F. Leary and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer. Mrs. Lewis Compton and Mrs. Ralph Riggs generally assisted, and a bevy of pretty young ladies passed cookies and ice cream and made themselves generally useful all afternoon. In the group were Miss Patricia Hurley, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Molly Stonestreet, Miss Jean Davis, Miss Eunice Wilson, Miss Florence King, Miss Frances Van Keuren, Miss Marjorie Towners and Miss Isabelle Badger.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Morgenthau's drawing room and dining room were overflowing with Capitalites. The hostess received wearing a green tea shade, enhanced by an oriental necklace of gold. Greeting guests with her were Mrs. Herbert E. Gaston, whose black frock was set off with gold touches, and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, whose brilliant-encrusted girdle added the only touch of color to her costume.

Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, generally assisting, was here, there and everywhere. A spring boquet of jonquils and iris decked the table.

Mrs. Stanley Reed At Tea Table

Mrs. Stanley Reed, who took her turn at pouring, wore an all-black costume with a pink velvet bow on her hat. Wide gold embroidery banded the neckline of Mrs. J. L. Houghteling's brown frock, and she wore a turquoise hat trimmed in feathers. Others who assisted at the tea table were Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Mrs. Basil Harris, Mrs. George H. Dern and Miss Anne Squire.

An amateur at the "at home" game timidly observed as she eyed the lusciously laden table, "I suppose we just help ourselves." Half a minute later she and a dozen or so others were following her suggestion. Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, who wore a silver fox jacket over her black frock, said she started out to make the rounds systematically and began at 4 p. m. at the Mayflower. Finding she was an hour early for the Edison party, she started her circling from another point and managed to get to all the receptions before the afternoon was over.

The buzz of feminine voices could be heard a couple of corridors away from the apartment of the Secretary of Agriculture at the Wardman Park Hotel. There, pretty Mrs. Wallace was hostess to more than 40 women before the party was over.

Centerpiece Is Horticultural Dream

Despite the number of guests, however, everybody seemed so bent on trying to cover all the "at homes" that at no time did the rooms become so crowded you couldn't take at least three steps without brushing against somebody else. Greeting her guests in the drawing room, Mrs. Wallace wore a handsome frock of pale blue crepe outlined with silver beading around the neck and waistline.

The centerpiece on the dining room table was one of the loveliest on view yesterday. A mass of pink roses, baby's breath and calla lilies, it was flanked with silver candelabra. Bowls of pink snapdragons and red roses and pots of poinsettias in the living room were other floral touches to the party.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister and sister-in-law of the hostess; Mrs. Guy M. Gillette and Mrs. Vincent Harrington, both of whom hail from Iowa, home-State of the Wallaces; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, who was a pretty picture in her smart black frock accented with a heavy gold necklace; Mrs. Milo Perkins, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, in a handsome brown ensemble; Mrs. Harry Naxter, in black, with a tiny veil drifting from her hat, and Mrs. James D. LeCron.

Among those seen in passing were Mrs. George H. Dern, widow of the former Secretary of War, who said she and her daughter, Mrs. Baxter, had taken a house on Bancroft place this year; Countess de Limur, Mme. Bostrom, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Frederick Gillette and a number of others who will be mentioned later in this story.

Mrs. John L. Lewis Brings Camellias

Over at Secretary Perkins' "at home" notables were all over the place. The hostess, who received alone at the top of the winding stairway, was gowned in street-length black crepe trimmed with white collar and cuffs and set off with a black tricorne. A high point of the party was when Mrs. John L. Lewis, swathed in a silver fox cape, came in and pinned a corsage of double camellias on Secretary Perkins' shoulder.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Alben Barkley, gowned in brown crepe with gold touches and a brown felt hat trimmed with coq feathers; Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. James M. Mead, Representative Mary T. Norton, Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin, Mrs. Marshall Dimock, Mrs. Benton McMillin and Mrs. Ernest Poole, of New York, who, with Mr. Poole and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Poole, recently arrived to visit the Secretary.

SEEN ON THE ROUNDS: Mrs. Sumner Welles and Senora de Espil, a "traveling twosome," getting to all four parties before the deadline . . . Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, also arriving and leaving together . . . The Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope, the center of an admiring group at the Perkins party . . . Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies threading their way through an admiring throng at the Edison reception . . . Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. John J. Dempsey and Mrs. William Barry, a partying threesome . . . Princess Colonna, trimly turned out in a mink coat and smart black hat.

Still others seen at one or more teas: Admiral Emory Land, Mrs. Harold Walker, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Walter Wyatt with Mrs. Uline Hill (the latter's daughter, Miss Patricia Hill was also "at homing" part of the afternoon); Mrs. Ernest Draper, Lady Leslie, Mme. Hurban, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mme. Fotitch, Mme. Bianchi, Mme. Naoumoff, and Mme. Rajamaitri; Mrs. Robert Davis and Miss Dita Davis; Judge and Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan, the latter handsomely costumed in burgundy crepe with a matching hat; Miss Eleanor Connolly, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. George Messersmith; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, Capt. and Mrs. Jack Juhan, and many many more.

Olin Dows Invites Friends to See Exhibition of His Work in New York

OLIN DOWS, who frequently startles the natives of Washington by riding a bicycle around the most crowded streets, has sent invitations to many of his friends here for an exhibition of his work at the Art Student League in New York.

The showing will open on Sunday and will comprise the murals which Mr. Dows has done for the postoffice at Rhinebeck, N. Y. Mrs. Dows and her son have a home near the Hudson River town, where their neighbors are the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, both of whom have taken a great interest in the new postoffice.

Mrs. Dows, who devotes herself to helping musicians, has been in Rhinebeck for the past few months, but is expected to return to her house in Georgetown after the opening of her son's exhibition.

EXCEPT FOR his bicycle riding, Mr. Dows is an otherwise conservative person without a trace of artistic Bohemianism. He spent weeks doing the research for his murals, which depict Hudson River history. Since the government art projects were started in 1933 he has been connected with this enterprise, and at one time headed Treasury projects for artists on relief. He can often be seen sitting before his easel on some picturesque street in Georgetown. Mr. Dows has done several handsome screens—Mrs. Dwight Davis owns one which depicts marching elephants.

MAJ. WILLIAM MASON WRIGHT, who abandoned the stage for a less glamorous career in the Army, is returning to the footlights this week in a local production. He plays the role of Sergt. Totty of Scotland Yard in the Civic Theater's production of "Criminal at Large," opening Sunday night at the Wardman Park Theater.

Maj. Wright comes of such an ultra-conservative family—his parents are Gen. and Mrs. William Mason Wright, of Georgetown—that it is difficult to realize he ever played four shows a day in vaudeville. But anyone who has seen him mimicing certain unfortunates at cocktail parties could guess that he has a wide streak of actor in him.

At one time Maj. Wright was headlined with Louise Dresser in a vaudeville act. His other partners have included Blanche Yurka, Henry Duffey and Edward Everett Horton. He went to the University of Pennsylvania, where he starred in Mask and Wig shows, and then played in stock, mostly character roles in "musicals and melos." Mason says he is a comic. While teaching at West Point in recent years he organized many a post theatrical.

Maj. Wright's brother and sister-in-law, Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright, will motor over from Annapolis to see him perform.

MRS. BURTON K. WHEELER says that as far as she knows she and Senator Wheeler haven't been invited to the Congressional reception tonight at the White House.

THE SPANISH EMBASSY looks just about as it did when Ambassador de los Rios was here, except for one important addition. This is a stunning Sert mural across an entire wall of the dining room, which Mme. de Cardenas, wife of the present envoy, brought with her from her apartment in Paris last autumn. As the painting is enormous, she had it cut into sections for transportation so that now it forms a screen. The work of the famous Spanish artist depicts a religious procession crossing the historic bridge in Toledo.

GUESTS AT the small tea given yesterday by Mme. de Cardenas spent most of the time admiring the mural. Present were three or four friends of their house guest, Col. Stewart Roddie, of London, who has known Mme. de Cardenas for the past 20 years. He is on a lecture tour of this country.

THE ATTRACTIVE HOSTESS wore black with pearls, as did a very pretty guest, Miss Betty Byrne, of New York, who is visiting Mrs. Eldridge Jordan. Miss Byrne says she always wears black, as she travels constantly, and it eliminates the accessories problem.

The Ambassador dropped in for a few moments after a day at the office. He said that one of their properties in Spain had been destroyed, and that their house in Madrid was in terrible disrepair as it had housed 3,000 refugees during the war.

John Foster, of the British Embassy, dropped in for the small and informal tea.

Namara to Sing At Musicale

The charming American singer, Marguerite Namara, who will perform at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musicale next Monday, gave a preview of her art to several ladies of the press early last evening at a buffet supper at Mrs. Townsend's home.

Namara, an old friend of Mrs. Townsend's, is staging a comeback in the concert world after having lost her voice a number of years ago. She left opera roles for musical comedy, in which she starred for a year at a tremendous salary. But the strenuous job of singing eight and nine times a week forced her retirement at an early age.

Recently Namara, who in private life is Mrs. George Hoy, has been making her home in California. When she decided on her comeback, she sang before Lucrezia Bori, and the famous singer immediately wrote Mrs. Townsend that her friend not only had a lovely voice, but such good looks and charm that she was sure to go far.

After supper last night Mrs. Townsend and some of the guests went on to the National Symphony Concert at Constitution Hall.

Brittens Gather Friends to View Crespo Portrait

To view a new portrait of the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten gathered in a few of their neighbors for tea and cocktails yesterday afternoon at their home on Sheridan circle.

The artist, Louis Crespo, who formely had a studio in Madrid, attended the party. Mrs. Britten, wearing a tea-length black velvet frock, received her guests standing near the portrait, which reposed on an easel in the drawing room.

Senor Crespo, an Ecuadorian, is a brother of the First Secretary of Ecuadorian Embassy here, Don Manuel Crespo. The Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro dropped in to see the work, as did the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, who have recently returned from Florida.

Schwellenbach Talks To Women Democrats

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

"If we are actuated by good faith, we can do no less than to stop participating in this Chinese-Japanese war," Senator Lewis B. Schwellenback, of Washington, said last night in addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Pointing out "the meat of the nine power pact was the agreement by the contracting parties other than China to respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China," Senator Schwellenbach declared that "after January 26, the opportunity will have come to wash from our hands the stain of our violation of this agreement."

"When the Manchurian incident started," he said, "our Government attempted to accept its responsibility under the Nine-Power agreement. It could secure no cooperation from any of the other important signatories. Since 1937, while our Government has at all times diplomatically supported our position, our citizens for the profit which might be derived therefrom, had actively participated in Japan's attack upon the territorial integrity of China. Up until the time of the outbreak of the European war, we were supplying about 70 per cent of the important war materials Japan used in its Chinese campaign. While no accurate figures are available since, we have every reason to believe that that percentage is now closer to 90 per cent than any other figure.

"Without our oil and gasoline, scrap iron and steel, automobile parts and accessories, and metal-working machinery, Japan's war against China would have collapsed mny months ago.

U. S. Provides Tools For Crushing China

"We have provided the tools and the instrumentality by which China's integrity is being destroyed. That is just as important a violation of the treaty as could have been accomplished had we provided a military expeditionary force."

Earlier in his discussion, Senator Schwellenbach asserted that the last decade had resulted in a new low in international morality because the wars waged during that period had been almost without exception in violation of treaties of security upon which the smaller nations had right to rely.

At the conclusion of the World War strenuous effort was made to establish a system of collective security, under which smaller nations might look for protection from the powerful ones. Among these were the covenant of the League of Nations, the Kellogg-Briand Pact and numersous nonaggression pacts between individual nations. As a result of these, many treaties, accords and informal agreements, the smaller nations of the world were lulled into a sense of security upon which they relied to their later disaster.

"During hte 1920's the more powerful nations of the world assumed a more definite responsibility and obligation than they had ever before assumed in world's history. Almost without exception they ran out on these responsibilities.

"We want peace in the United States. Our people want peace to be established and maintained throughout the world. We can have very little hope for the attainment of that peace until the principles of common ordinary decency are once again recognized by the governments of the world. It will avail us nothing to attack aggression by simply attacking the totalitarian form of governments which some of the nations have taken. What we must have first is a rebirtr of international morality.

Origin of Treaty Rests on World War

"There is one instance in which our Government, for its own benefit and for its own advantage assumed important and binding obligations toward another nation in the world. That was the Nine Power Agreement of 1922.

"China paid a very definite consideration for the Nine Power agreement. China was shamefully treated at Versailles. Japan which had contributed little to the allied cause was granted German rights in China. Realizing that, the Chinese people in 1919 commenced a vigorous boycott against the use of Japanese goods. That boycott continued for two years, and by the time of the calling of the Washington conference had practically brough Japan to her knees so far as relationship with China was concerned. We asked China to relilinquish the advantage she had gained through the boycott method.

"We wanted to decrease naval expenditures. We wanted to extend our commercial interests in the Far East. The consideration which we paid to China for the abandonment of the Chinese boycott was the execution by nine nations, including ourselves and Japan, of the Nine Power Pact."

Senator Schwellenbach indicated it was up to the United States to lead the movement back to "international morality" by halting indirect participation in the Oriental war.

Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president dent of the club, introduced him. Mrs. Schwellenbach was also a guest of honor.

Among others present were Senator Joseph Guffey, who entertained in his party Mrs. Emily Bradshaw, Miss Leila Stiles, Miss Constance Wendell, Miss Jane Wendell and Miss Elizabeth Smith; Mrs. Meade Fletcher, who had as her guest, Mrs. A. A. Berle, Mr. and Mrs. R. Kirkpatrick Noble and their niece, Miss Suzanne Noble, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja; Miss Mary E. Bakewell, who entertained Dr. and Mrs. John Minor and Dr. Mrs. William B. Marbury.

Miss Cornelia Bassel, Mrs. Paul Linebarger, whose party included Dr. and Mrs. William Kinnan, Admiral and Mrs. Edward Stitt, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Puller and Mrs. N. B. Dial; Mrs. Caroll Miller, Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. Eugene Tighe, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Bates Warren, Mrs. E. A. Stuart, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Eicher and Miss Betty Eicher, Mrs. Rudolph Tenerowicz, Mrs. O. W. McNeese, Mrs. W. W. Hubbard, former president, and Mrs. Frank S. Perry, who entertained Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alexander.

Winthrop School's Early Days Are Told to A. A. U. W.

Winthrop College in the days of its beginning in Columbia, S. C., was described last night by Mrs. Eliza Scaife, a member of the first class. She spoke at the founders' day dinner held at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

There were then 21 pupils with an adjoining school for observation and practice work, and a boarding house where the students stayed, said Mrs. Scaife. Now there are 1,700 students, and the college, one of the foremost girls' schools of the South, is located in Rock Hill, S. C. The course was then one year. Now it is four.

More than 50 alumnae and former students attended the dinner. Among those present was Miss Sara Marcum, former assistant to the late Dr. David Bancroft Johnson, founder and first president of the college. Motion pictures of the school were shown and Miss Anne Tilghman talked on campus life today.

Forthcoming Bethany Alumni Dinner Recalls Vivid Memories of Kansas Town

ANNOUNCEMENT of a dinner tonight at which former students of Bethany College, in Lindsborg, Kans., will greet the president, Dr. Ernest Philblad, brought back to me vivid memories of one of the most picturesque little towns in the Middle West. It is a place of traditions despite its brief history of 70-odd years, and has made a contribution to music in this country that is unique.

Bethany students bring away something more than college loyalty. Perhaps it is a lev for the sturdy pioneer spirit of the Swedish settlers who had courage to start the school but in the heart of the Kansas prairie.

When I was there, I knew Mrs. Carl Swenson, widow of the founder. She had come with him as a bride from her home in Illinois. He was sent to Lindsborg as pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church—his first charge. She had been organist for her church at home, so she played the little organ in the one-room frame building there. It served for religious services on Sundays and a college on week-days. She worked side by side with her husband in all his undertakings to promote education and culture in the prairie community.

ONE SPRING, a few years after they went there, she told me, a letter came from home describing the successful rendition of Handel's "Messiah" by the students at Augustana College in Illinois. "If they can do it there, we can do it here," said Dr. Swenson—and they did.

The handful of students at the school, townspeople and those from neighboring farms, made up the chorus of 50 voices. Some came 15 miles in lumber wagons to attend rehearsals. The initial rendition was given on Easter Sunday, 1882. Since then, with only a season's interruption, the oratorio has been given every Palm Sunday, Good Friday and Easter. Mrs. Swenson sang in the chorus in more than 100 renditions.

Until a few years ago, the old octagonal fram building the students called "the sheep barn" was the auditorium. Long, hard, wooden benches (removed for community dinners and basketball games) were the reserved seats. Several thousand people came every season from all parts of Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Colorado, Nebraska and more distant States, to hear the chorus.

I shall never forget my first rehearsal. The score was new to me but when the great chorus—then of 500 voices—sang, I sang with it, the great volume of music carried me along. I can still remember the creepy feeling that went up my back when I first sang with that body of voices. Hagbard Brasse, head of the music department, conducted then as he does now. But the renditions are now in Presser Hall, the auditorium for which the late Mme. Schumann-Heink broke the ground.

With the memory of the music at "Messiah" time, also comes the fragrance of the olive trees which bloom in Lindsborg in the spring—the excitement as crowds pour into the little town of the "Messiah" festival—the concert artists I heard there: Heifitz, Marion Talley (before she went to the Metropolitan), Hemphill, Sophia Breslau, Eugene Ysaye, Richard Crooks and many others. Nordica was the first world-famous singer who appeared there, but that was long before I knew Lindsborg.

MRS. WILLIAM BRADFORD CAFKY, 2003 Thirty-seventh street, and Vernon Holm, of the Bureau of Standards, are in charge of arrangements for tonight's dinner. She was one of the music students and is now soprano soloist and choir director at the Union Methodist Church. She is also president of the local chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, professional musical fraternity.

Another who will be there is Mrs. Leland Love, of Laurel, the former Elizabeth Green, who was an art student under Birger Sandzen and taught at Stephens and Cottey Colleges in Missouri before coming East.

Ward-Belmont Club Meets

The Ward-Belmont Club of Washington yesterday had the largest meeting since its organization, a luncheon at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, at which Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson, of The Post, read some of her poems. Mrs. Nelson, who is a club member, was introduced by Mrs. Irving Morton, chairman of program committee.

Mrs. Nelson read a group of short poems, mainly sonnets which have been published in newspapers and magazines and copied in anthologies. She also read her recently published narrative poem: "Of Life and Time" and lyrics from the libretto of Kalopin.

One of her poems, reflecting her experience overseas during the World War, was entitled "Airplanes in France." The final verse reads:

"We ride air currnets as the swallow wings,
"And swiftly, as a homing thought, we skim
"Now down in breathless glides, where day is dim
"Then up, until the primal silence sings.
"About us, peace—and God's eternal gifts,
"While far below, the smoke of battle drifts."

Mrs. Robert P. Armistead, president of the club, presided at the luncheon and introduced eight new members. They were Mrs. Marvin Johnson, Mrs. Frances Long Partridge, Miss Lucille Bailey, Mrs. Robert Selph Henry, Mrs. John F. Ratrie, Miss Madeline McCandless, Mrs. Pat V. Rayburn, Mrs. Robert Greenleaf.

Mrs. Van Zandt to Speak

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt, lecturer, journalist, and world traveler, will be the speaker on the regular monthly radio program of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, over Station WMAL, tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Van Zandt, who will speak on "Women of the Orient," will be introduced by Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, former president of the federation, and now chairman of the radio committee.

Hadassah Hears Miss Warburg Describe Aiding of Refugees

15 More Children From Central Europe To Be Established in New Homes in Palestine as Result of Celebration Here

Fifteen more refugee children from central Europe will be established in new homes in Palestine as a result of the anniversary celebration of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah yesterday. An audience that filled the Cafritz Auditorium at the Jewish Community Center heard Miss Gisela Warburg, of Berlin, describe the Youth Aliyah (immigration) movement at the anniversary meeting.

Hadassah, women's Zionist organization founded by Miss Henrietta Szold, is the only American agency for Youth Aliyah, by which 6,000 refugee boys and girls have been transferred to Palestine.

These children are prepared for their new life by a month's intensive training in Germany and the countries which admit them temporarily. They are then maintained and educated for two years in communities in Palestine, at the end of which period they support themselves.

In the eyes of these young people, the social structure built by their parents has failed, said Miss Warburg, and they are eager to build a new kind—to come back to the land and manual labor. More than 76 per cent have stayed on the land in groups, she said. If there are hardships the motto is: "What does it matter?" There is a spirit of mutual helpfulness, a will to work, and the inspiration of gratitude for a homeland where they are welcomed and their work is not only wanted but needed, she explained.

She described the appalling situation in October, 1938, when, in the middle of the night whole Jewish families throughout Germany were taken from their homes and 10,000 dumped on a Polish border town of 400 inhobitants. This seemed the worst that could happen, she said, but they could not forsee the destruction of Poland, nor the pogrom of November 10.

Unprecedented in history, she said, was the receiving by a belligerent nation of children from an enemy country, but England accepted all the refugee boys and girls who were scheduled to go there on their way to Palestine at the time the war broke out. English families, said Miss Warburg, have taken in 8,000 children during the past year.

Mothers, without thought of the separation, eagerly thrust their children into the hands of the Youth Aliyah workers. The immigration is going on despite the war but now the families, scattered over five continents, no longer have any word of the fate of the others, Miss Warburg said.

She spoke with a slight German accent and without visible emotion, simply stating facts as she knew them. She was slight of stature and might be called unusually pretty except that the strength and serenity of her face deserve a better description. Mrs. Moe Offenberg, the Hadassah president, introduced her. Also on the program were two German refugees, gifted musicians who have brought their talent to America.

They were Dr. Heinz Beissinger, a young physician who is also a graduate of St. Cecelia Conservatory in Rome, who presented piano selections, and Cantor Hilel Lipsicas, for five and a half years cantor of Temple Teshurun in Jerusalem, who sang. Both now reside in Baltimore.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Lead Speakers

Mrs. Roosevelt will head the list of speakers who will exchange practical speaking experiences as a feature of the opening meeting of Mrs. Hugh Butler's winter course in platform speaking, this morning at Pierce Hall of All Souls' Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets.

Mrs. Harry Engelbright, wife of Representative Engelbright, of California; Mrs. Herman P. Eberharter, wife of Representative Eberharter, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Fred Bradley, wife of Representative Bradley, of Michigan, also will be on the program.

Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the education committee, and Miss Stelita Stapleton, of the Junior League, also will speak.

Mrs. Haig Shekerjian, wife of Lieut. Col. Hail Shekerjian, of the United States Army, and first prize winner of the fall class, will discuss public speaking from the point of view of an Army wife. Mrs. Charles M. Harron, of California, will talk on: "Demosthenes' Disciples in a Democracy."

Lindley to Talk On Trade Pacts

Ernest K. Lindley, columnist for The Post, will speak tonight on a Town Hall program sponsored by the Service Council of the Jewish Community Center.

Lindley, also on the editorial staff of News Week, will discuss extensions of the reciprocal trade action act. The talk will be broadcast over Station WMAL at 9 p. m. The program will take place at the Jewish Community Center and will be open to the public.

Budget Bureau Study Says Reorganization Is Directly Responsible

Last summer's reorganization orders, which President Roosevelt estimated Tuesday had already resulted in a saving of $11,000,000, are directly responsible for dismissing not more than 300 Federal employes, it was disclosed by a Budget Bureau study released yesterday.

The study, prepared for Budget Director Smith, noted that in agencies affected by the reorganization programs employment had declined by 5,006 between July 31 and October 31. However, in a general curtailment program in no way connected with the effect of the orders, two transferred agencies, the Works Progress and Public Works Administrations, laid off a total of 5,939 employes between those dates.

SSB Takes on 379

Although this would make it appear that the effect of the orders themselves had actually been to increase employment, it was noted that more than 700 employes had been given temporary part-time work in Alaska by the Bureau of Fisheries, and 379 had been taken on by the Social Security Board after enactment of legislation moving up to 1940 the beginning of old-age pension payments.

Excluding these organizations, the net decrease in employment in the agencies affected by the orders is 282.

Lighthouse Personnel Drops

Largest drops came in the consolidated Coast Guard-Lighthouse Service, where employment diminished by 228; the Home Owners Loan Corporation, with a decline of 291; the Public Building Administration, 95; the Office of Education, 32, and the Public Roads Administration, 69.

There were small increases in 19 other reorganized agencies.

Taken as a whole, Federal employment increased over the three months period by 9,470, the study showed. Principal gains were in agencies affected by expansion of the defense program, and the Commerce Department and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The increase in the former came with the hiring of workers for the 1940 census, and in the latter for new construction work and the transfer of employes of private utility properties, purchased by the TVA.

Holding Firm Asks To Reorganize

13. The company, therefore, he said, had no alternative except to file its petition for reorganization.

Whiteford said the associated system had more money than at any time for several years, and the operating companies had shown a "tremendous increase in earnings within the last few months." During the short period in which he has been president, he said, large economies have been effected and many others planned.

He pointed out that Associated Gas & Electric Corporation had filed a plan of voluntary reorganization with the commission under the holding company act. It was hoped, he said, that the commission would permit a voluntary reorganization to take place under the broad powers of this act without resort to court action.

He expressed the belief that "prompt appointment of competent trustees who, under the direction of the court, will exercise rigid control of the management and bring about continued reductions in expenses, will conserve the interests of security holders and assure the uninterrupted and efficient operation of the system."

Effects Would Be Beneficial

Healy and Frank explained that it would take two or three years to work out a plan of voluntary reorganization under the holding company act and, during this time, the commission would have to approve millions of dollars of dividend payments from Associated Gas & Electric Corporation to Associated Gas & Electric Co.

This would be necessary to keep the parent company going. Meanwhile, Healy said, the corporation would be impairing its capital, since "our analysis shows it has no earned surplus balance." The commission contended that the corporation would be jeopardizing its ability to pay interest on its own obligations.

The fact that the corporation filed a plan of reorganization under the holding company act, Healy declared, showed that "reorganization was very greatly needed."

Healy felt that the effect of the reorganization move would be beneficial. It should free the sound operating companies in the system, he said, and make it easier for them to obtain financing. He commended Whiteford for his coöperation with the commission.

Deans of Business Favor Commerce Extension Service

The deans of 30 State university business schools gathered here yesterday to give their support to legislation for a Commerce Department "extension service" throughout the country to aid business on a regionalized, decentralized basis.

Spokesmen of the educators will appear at 10 a. m. today at hearings before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to indorse the Sheppard-Robinson bill, which would provide $2,000,000 for the purpose.

Willard L. Thorp, assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, and Nathanael H. Engle, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, spoke for the bill at committee hearings yesterday.

Mrs. Clapper Explains Rural Housing Program

Assurances that Rural Housing Administration plans call for construction of houses on individual farms, rather than in village groups, were given by Mrs. Raymond Clapper, RHA secretary-treasurer for Montgomery County, last night at a meeting of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association.

The farmers are justified in their protests against the earlier plan to establish houses in villages as this would tend to draw labor away from farms, she said.

Mrs. Clapper said it was important to raise housing standards in Montgomery and the country as a whole. One of seven houses in the Nation is sub-standard, she said.

The unit voted support of a resolution of Mrs. Ira Castles urging "clarification and study" of county zoning regulations to prevent a recurrence of recent violations that were cited.

Senate Approves Joint Budget Study

will be launched in the Senate for a joint fiscal study by members of the Senate Appropriations and Finance committees, it was learned.

House Republicans, lead by Minority Leader Martin, swung behind the Harrison resolution, but admitted their inability to budge it without House Democratic support. Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, will take the House floor today for the Harrison resolution, and demand joint action toward budget-balancing.

Sharp attacks on the Administration spending policies mingled with coalition criticism of the President's emergency defense budget in Senate debate on the fiscal study plan.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado said the President outmaneuvered Congress and knowingly put it in a spot by slashing items "very dear to the hearts of Congress."

If the cuts are restored, he said, Mr. Roosevelt will hold Congress responsible for raising the debt limit. Adams said Congress should reply "You have made these cuts. They are your recommendations, and we will stand by them. It is your responsibility if you have cut too depely."

The Colorado Democrat declared there was an "easy way" for Congress to restore some of the reduced items without levying new taxes or breaking through the debt limit. He said they could do it by eliminating appropriations for national defense, which he said were not needed.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, took sharp issue. "We must take care of the question of national defense," asserted Byrnes. "If it were true we are in no danger of war, then there would be no excuse whatever for any Army or Navy bill."

Adams declared the proposed fiscal study, embracing national defense, was "sound," but predicted results would be disappointing. Byrnes said it "can do no harm, and may be helpful. Harrison argued it would provide "an approach to the time when Government expenditures and revenues might balance.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, indorsed the resolution as "the first effort that has been made to bring the question of revenue and appropriations within the four walls of the same room." But he demanded it include a "rock-bottom, courageous, thoroughgoing, realistic exploration" of defense spending.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, whose budget-balancing formula was attacked Tuesday by the President, supported the plan as an effort to relate taxes with budget needs, but said it would fail unless "enthusiastically" prosecuted. He charged the President had not set a good example by increasing the Budget Bureau's appropriations 30 per cent.

House Approves Antilynch Bill

making the municipalities and counties liable for damages.

The principal interest and the most extended discussion centered upon an amendment by Representative Colmer (Democrat), Mississippi, which he called the "gangster amendment." This would have made the penalties apply to gang murders.

Asserting that last year there were three lynchings in the entire United States and 272 murders in New York City, Colmer asked, "Why should we worry with a mere detail, a mere bagatelle?"

Proponents of the measure replied that the proposal was intended to "load down the bill with so many amendments that it will sink."

Observing that the bill "never fails" to come up in an election year, Colmer noted ironically that residents of Harlem are among Gavagan's constituents.

"We all want to see a Democrat represent the great Harlem district," he said. "I hope we will not dispose of this bill, because if we do we will dispose of his (Gavagan's) most potent argument for remaining in this House."

"I'll treat his remarks with the contempt that they deserve," Gavagan snorted, and proceeded to call Colmer's attention to the dispatch of National Guardsmen to Prentiss, Miss., yesterday to protect two colored men arraigned on a charge of killing a peace officer.

Another Mississippian, Rankin retorted, that "the National Guard went down there to protect them at the expense of the State and if it had been a gang murder in New York City, they would have got no protection."

House Group To Ask Data on Reorganization

Commissioners May Be Called on to Submit Plan Directly

The District Commissioners will be asked to submit their recommendations on municipal reorganization directly to the House District Committee next Monday unless the Budget Bureau has released the proposal, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday.

After postponing a scheduled conference with Commissioner Allen until tomorrow, Kennedy said he saw no reason for delaying subcommittee action on account of the Budget Bureau's study of the plan.

"We asked the Commissioners to submit their report to the reorganization sub-committee by December 15," he said, "and I expect them to produce it when the full committee holds its first meeting Monday."

The Budget Bureau yesterday asked for additional copies of the revised Seal plan, and District officials predicted that it might be held up several weeks. Copies are being sent to the Justice Department, the Civil Service Commission, the Interior Department and other Federal agencies affected for comment.

The draft was submitted first to the Budget Bureau, it is understood, at the instruction of President Roosevelt. Previously the Commissioners intended to send it directly to Congress.

Several revisions were made in the plan, it was learned after Allen's call at the White House. These have not been divulged, but it is understood that one provides for the creation of a citizens' advisory council.

Chairman Randolph said the Commissioners had been invited to the first District Committee meeting to offer their legislative program.

Boys' Club Attendance Climbs 25 Per Cent

Charles M. Fyfe, managnig director of the Boys Club of Washington, reported yesterday that last year's attendance at the four club branches set a new record. The total comprised 738,830 visits in 1939, composed to 595,773 the year before, he said.

Attendance reports of the branches showed 359,401 visits to the Southeast branch, 156,886 at the Central Club, 112,185 at Georgetown and 110,358 in Northeast.

Walsh Urges 'Paper Navy' Be Built

year's building program, the fleet will slip back rather than gain.

A day crowded with national defense developments saw the following moves:

The House Appropriations Committee approved, in general, President Roosevelt's emergency expenditures for defense and neutrality. A $267,197,908 deficiency bill was reported, cut $4,801,613 under budget estimates. Most of the reductions were deferments.

Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, told the House Naval Committee that if the $4,000,000 harbor improvements at Guam are not approved by Congress, Navy ships and aircraft must continue to use it despite hazards.

The coordinator of naval shipbuilding, Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee, declared that the Navy had always been making mistakes in the construction of ships similar to those which made a number of new destroyers unstable under certain conditions. This is inevitable in developing new types, he said.

The Army moved to equip its new motorcycle cavalry, by placing orders with the Harley-Davidson and Indian companies for about 1,750 motorcycles at $789,-103.

At yesterday's hearings on the Vinson naval expansion bill, Admiral Stark said the present Guam proposal "hasn't anything in the world to do with fortifying the island," and urged that general authority existed for asking funds.

Senator Walsh indorsed the Guam project. Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Adams, of Colorado; Gillette, of Iowa, and Lucas, of Illinois (Democrats), criticized the plan.

Admiral Stark told the House committee that even with the proposed increase in ships, the Navy "would be driven back" if attacked by a coalition of Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia.

"We might be in a tight corner," he said, "but I believe we would do a pretty fair job . . . We couldn't keep a determined enemy from making inroads here and there . . . but I think we could take care of our interests in the Caribbean, home coasts, and within certain limits in the Pacific."

Stark said the Navy proposed to use about 72,000 tons of the proposed increase for aircraft carriers, 192,000 tons for cruisers, 60,000 for destroyers and 45,000 for submarines.

Rain, Warmer Seen After 3-Year Low

Mercury Drops to 12 as Ice and Snow Send Four Persons To Hospitals Here

Washington's winter crop of ice and snow, which yesterday sent four persons to hospitals, as the mercury dropped to a three-year low, today will give way to warmer temperatures and rain, the Weather Bureau said last night.

Today's predicted warmer weather will come with winds from the south and southwest, officials said. A low of 25 was forecast for early today, and light snow may fall, turning to rain.

The rising mercury brought hope to ice-bound Chesapeake Bay shipping men, but heavy ice in Baltimore harbor forced the Bermuda Clipper to land at Norfolk. A Pennsylvania Central Airlines plane brought the ten passengers and mail on to Washington and Baltimore.

The clipper will remain at Norfolk until today, when ice conditions at Pan American's base in Baltimore are expected to clear up, the Associated Press reported.

Injured by Snowball

Added to Washington's winter accident list were the following:

C. F. Westover, 51, 3412 Tenth street northeast, a passenger in a streetcar on Eckington place near Florida avenue, cut by flying glass when a boy threw a snowball through the window. He was treated at Sibley Hospital.

Enid Faulkrod, 20, of 12 Second street northeast, treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts on her face, received while sliding on the Shoreham hill.

Harry C. Robertson, 40, 1318 East Capitol street, who slipped on the ice at Tennessee avenue and East Capitol street, and received treatment for a cut on the head at Casualty Hospital.

Edith Baturin, 28, of 941 Randolph street northwest, slipped on the ice Fifteenth and F streets northwest. A physician treated her for bruises.

The mercury rose past the freezing mark to 36 at 3:30 p. m., after dropping to 12 at 5:15 a. m., lowest mark since February, 1936, the Bureau reported.

Mrs. Bristol Injured In Traffic Mishap

Mrs. Helen M. Bristol, Washington society notable and widow of Admiral Mark L. Bristol, was injured in an automobile crash at Twentieth and P streets northwest yesterday.

Mrs. Bristol suffered two fractured ribs, but her condition was said to be good. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital. Her chauffeur, Henry Helson, suffered a shoulder injury.

She was enroute from her home at 1621 Massachusetts avenue northwest, to take her two pet dogs to a veterinary in Georgetown, friends said. Both pets escaped injury.

Mrs. Bristol's husband, who died in May, was a former High Commissioner to Turkey, and had served in numerous key diplomatic and naval assignments.

3 Pedestrians Hurt

Three pedestrians were injured in automobile accidents on District streets yesterday. Driver of one of the cars was charged with driving on the left of a loading platform.

William Penner, 70, of 1048 Jefferson street northwest, suffered a fractured right leg and possible head and internal injuries when he was struck at Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Police said he was hit by a car driven by William J. Warner, 49, of 4905 Potomac avenue northwest. Warner was charged at the Seventh Precinct Station with driving to the left of the loading platform at the scene of the accident.

Burton W. Day, 55, of 415 G street northwest, was hit at Fifth and E streets northwest by a car driven by Joseph Corbett, 52, of 812 Decatur street northwest. Day was treated at Emergency Hospital for body cuts and abrasions of the face.

Lloyd H. Black, 39, of 2504 Bladensburg road northeast, was crossing Bladensburg road in the 2900 block when he was struck by a car driven by George M. Bryant, 38, of Baltimore. Black was treated at Sibley Hospital for a fractured right leg and abrasions. He was transferred to Walter Reed Hospital.

Little Was Seen With 3 Marines At Roadside Cafe

Sidney Little, 29-year-old tobacco salesman, was seen with three men in Marine uniform on the Washington-Richmond highway a few hours before his body was found Sunday at a picnic ground near Fort Hunt, Va., it was disclosed last night.

In the hands of G-men was a report that a man fitting Little's description drove up to a roadside restaurant en route toward Fort Hunt and stepped out of the coupe with the Marines for a moment.

The automobile, it was reported, tallied with the description of the blood-stained coupe later found near Triangle, Va., and identified as belonging of Little.

It was learned Federal investigators had visited Quantico Marine base.

Woman Sues Store For $100.000

Edna Biggs Shaner, 23, of 514 Kennedy street northwest, sued in the District Court yesterday for $100,000 damages for alleged injuries she suffered in a fall nearly six years ago.

Miss Shaner's complaint, filed by Attorney Frederick R. Wilson, said that while she was working at the F. & W. 5-10-25 Cent Store, 400 Seventh street northwest, a stair rail gave way and caused her to fall. She charged negligence.

Lambertson Volunteers for D.C. Committee

Only One Answers Taylor's Call for Service on Unit

But one volunteer responded yesterday to the invitation of Chairman Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee, to join the District sub-committee. He is Representative William P. Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas.

Lambertson, a farmer who has been a member of the House six terms, said his only reason for offering to take the unpopular assignment was that he wanted more work and wished to broaden his service.

Undiscouraged, Taylor said he has the names of several other members to consult in the hope of adding three Democrats to the sub-committee.

He admitted that one is Representative Collins, of Mississippi, who resigned last year as chairman.

"Representative Collins knows a lot about the District," Taylor said, "and he would be a valuable member even though he could sit in on hearings only occasionally."

Taylor pointed out that he was in no hurry to increase the subcommittee membership as the District budget will not be considered before March.

His goal is to increase the membership to eight members, five Democrats and three Republicans. With the addition of Lambertson, the minority quota was reached.

Brig. Gen. Rice's Burial Today In Arlington

Burial rites will be held in Arlington Cemetery at 10 a. m. today for Brig. Gen. John Hodgen Rice, chief ordnance officer of the American Expeditionary Force in France during the World War, who died Sunday night in his home at Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Before going overseas in June, 1918, Gen. Rice, then a major, ordered $700,000,000 worth of war materials in Washington. His services in France won him the Distinguished Service Medal and made him a commander in the Legion of honor.

A native of St. Louis, he was a member of the class of 1893 at West Point. Retired at his own request in 1921, he became vice president of the American Machine & Foundry Co.

D. C. Boy, 10, Shot As Brother's Chum Shows Off Rifle

Vincent Barkley, 10, of 1205 I street southeast, was shot in the living room of his home last night by a .22 caliber rifle brought home from camp by a CCC boy.

VINCENT

Freddie Sullivan, 18, of 1106 I street southeast, was showing his rifle to Vincent's brother, Bernard, 17, police said, when it was discharged. The bullet entered high in Vincent's thigh.

At Casualty Hospital surgeons said an operation would be necessary to find the bullet.

Vincent's mother, Mrs. Marion Barkley, a night employe of the Postoffice Department, was not at home. She had not been informed of the shooting.

Safety Society Here Stresses Education

Education for safety was stressed last night at the monthly meeting of the Washington Safety Council at the Harrington Hotel. The socitty is composed of safety engineers in the Government and private industry, about 60 of whom were present.

Safety education should begin in high school, said Prof. Albert Whitney, of the National Conservation Bureau. The high school child's mind, he said, "has a fresh and unsophisticated outlook on things, and that is the time to start." He recommended actual road training in safety, as well as classroom instruction.

Dr. R. R. Sayers, director of industrial health, United States Public Health Service, declared the fundamental principles of safety were based on education.

Accidents in the home increased 2 per cent in the first 11 months of 1939 over the equivalent period in 1938, said W. H. Cameron, manager of the National Safety Council, while those in industry decreased 4 per cent.

Lew Palmer, of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., announced that an award would be made in March for the first time to the airline with the best safety record by the National Safety Council. A. J. Agnew, secretary of the American Standards Association, said the Federal Government bought more safety appliances last year than ever before.

Citizens Ask Reorganizing, Vote Be Split

Rhode Island Avenue Group Wants Issues Treated Separately

Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night went on record in favor of a resolution urging "all District reorganization plans be divorced" from the question of District or national suffrage.

T. J. Llewellyn, who presented the resolution, said District needs could adequately be presented to Congress and the Commissioners through a representative body similar to the Citizens Advisory Committee.

Harold J. Clay was re-elected president of the association.

Others named to office were John L. Fowler, first vice president; Mrs. A. H. Engelbrecht, re-elected second vice president; Wallace E. Perry, re-elected secretary; Joseph A. Smith, financial secretary; Miss Katherine Donahey, re-elected assistant secretary; J. A. Duerksen, re-elected treasurer, and T. J. Llewellyn, and W. L. Howenstein, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Fort Dupont Park

Fort Dupont Park will be closed for coasting by the National Park Service until further notice, the North Randle Highlands Citizens Association learned last night at its meeting in the portable school, Minnesota avenue and E street southeast. The association decided to ask that CCC enrollees camped in the park be used to construct some artificial means for ice skating.

The association commended the Southeast Council for its work toward a safety program for winter sports and elected Mrs. Rose M. Thomas corresponding secretary. A resolution opposed the Randolph bill proposing diversion of the present 1 cent gasoline tax to the general fund and application of a second 1 cent tax for road purposes.

Anyone Seen His Boots?

Fireman Jaspar G. Gilkinson, of No. 28 Engine Co., lost a pair of rubber boots at a chimney fire yesterday. Last night he appealed to police to help him recover them—or he'll have to buy more.

Private Gilkinson reported the fire was at the home of Mrs. G. H. Judd, at Thirty-fourth and Woodley streets northwest.

Approves $199,750 Deficiency Request For Quick Utilization Of Coolidge High

Faced with the prospect of a white elephant standing where a high school should be, the Board of Education yesterday took the first step toward early utilization of the new Calvin Coolidge High School.

Acting on urgent recommendations of Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, a member, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent, the board approved a deficiency request for $199,750 to furnish and equip the building at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

Work on the structure was completed weeks ago, in plenty of time for occupancy when the second school term begins next month. But no money is available for its furnishings and equipment.

The school board's action yesterday simply amounts to an advance of funds. The 1941 supply bill now awaiting Congressional approval includes the $199,750 equipment item, but if the building is to be ready for occupancy next September the money must be made available before the beginning of the 1941 fiscal year next July 1.

Funds May Be Too Late

"Indeed, I fear that even if the sum is granted in a deficiency bill it is already too late to have the new high school ready for use by next September," said Mrs. Smith.

Chairman of the board's buildings, grounds and equipment committee, she reported having inspected the structure recently and found it to be "a splendid school, one for which all who had anything to do with its building should be commended."

"The procurement of furniture and equipment for the Calvin Coolidge High School involves the advertising and taking of bids, which requires from four to six weeks," said Dr. Ballou's memorandum. "The contractors for the furniture and equipment require from 60 to 90 days in which to make delivery under normal conditions.

"The installation of the equipment requires from one to six weeks. Due to the conditions of the market, many manufacturers are not in a position to enter into contract on a short delivery basis."

The school board also approved a deficiency request for $66,160 to equip the new Jefferson Memorial Junior High School, which is scheduled to be completed in August. In this case, too, Dr. Ballou pointed out that while the sum is provided for in the 1941 budget, it must be made available this winter or spring if the building is to be ready for occupancy next September.

Other Deficiency Items Approved

Other deficiency items approved included $4,800 for completion of equipment at Banneker Junior High School and $22,400 to hire 12 additional teachers in the colored junior high schools, beginning February 1.

The board's indorsement also was given Dr. Ballau's recommendation that the deficiency bill include funds for acquisition of land to expand physical education facilities at Smothers School. The amount has not been decided.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, reported to the board that investigation had disclosed that the 15-year-old colored youth who ended his life last Friday had not been suspended from classes at Armstrong High School, as reported. The suicide victim was David Wells.

The board granted Dr. Ballou leave to attend an educational conference in New York January 23, voted to fix a date in the week of January 22 when it will discuss the school budget with citizens' groups and deferred action until next week on reports of the senior and junior high schools' textbook committees.

Sled Is Stolen

Station Clerk W. W. Styles, of Third Precinct, accustomed to hear gruff voices, received a jolt last night when he lifted his phone to hear a childish treble.

Harvey Wolf, 7, of 1826 M street northwest, was much put out because someone filched his new sled from the front porch. He described the sled with vivid accuracy, Styles said.

Boy, 6, Lost at Union Station Has Christmas All Over Again

"Eddie" (left), who isn't ever sure that's his name, apparently doesn't mind being lost as long as he stays in the company of Eda Wood, 2308 Ashmead place northwest, of the Travelers Aid Society

Six-year-old Eddie Hale yesterday had the time of his life.

The fact that Eddie was lost made no difference at all. In fact, he wasn't even sure his name was Eddie Hale. He wasn't sure he was 6. All he could bank on was that as far as he was concerned it was still Christmas and strange people are very kind.

Eddie stepped from a Florida train at Union Station at 4:45 a. m., clutching a suitcase filled with toys and another with his clothing. The conductor told station attendants he had come from Jacksonville and was to be met at the Travelers Aid booth.

Thus Eddie, very sleepy indeed and not impressed with snowy Washington, landed in the Capital.

At 9 p. m. Eddie was still there with the Travelers Aid, happy as a lark. He had all but worn out his toys; restless passengers had played football with him in the lobby, messenger boys had helped him run his train, red caps had loaded his small insides dangerously full with candy, he had shot practically everybody in sight with his two toy pistols.

To the serious business of spotting him on a home track he gave but little heed. Who put him on the train?

"My mama."

"Who was going to meet you here?"

"My other mama."

"What is your father's name?"

"Charlie"—hesitantly.

"Who gave you all those pretty toys."

He beamed. "Santaa Claus."

So it went. Caseworkers at the Travelers Aid booth changed shifts and for each ensuing eight hours that rolled by, Eddie had another new mama. And each mama-for-the-shift had her hands full.

Meanwhile, the Travelers Aid was busy though it had so little to work on. They learned from Jacksonville that the gateman there remembered seeing a small lad answering Eddie's description led toward a northbound train by an elderly man. Detectives of the Metropolitan Police were put on the scent. And Eddie, serenely happy, had his Christmas all over again in Washington's cavernous Union Station.

When he arrived he was wearing a brown corduroy overall suit with a norfolk jacket, a blue navy peacoat with fine brass buttons and a rating on its sleeve, tan shoes, a white shirt and yellow tie. With his baggage he carried a cowboy suit, which no doubt he would have preferred in sartorial matters.

Unsuccessful in its day-long search, the Travelers Aid, however dogged in its perseverance, had decided to give up if he wasn't claimed by his bedtime. At 9 o'clock he was taken to the Receiving Home and put promptly to bed.

Robbers Get $70 at 2 Stores; Woman Scares Off 2 Others

Robbers got $70 in two robberies yesterday while one attempt backfired when a customer entered an ice cream store unaware of what was going on and frightened away two armed youths.

Two colored men escaped with $5, including a handful of pennies, from a bakery shop at 82 L street northwest, after threatening Mrs. Lena Franke, 61, with their hands in their pockets as if they had guns.

Mrs. Franke was alone in the shop when the men entered, demanding her money. She told police she handed over several dollars in silver. Not satisfied, one of the men made a move to go behind the counter.

"What do you want now?" she asked. "I only have a few pennies left."

"Gimme those," she quoted the man, who grabbed them and ran through an alley with his companion.

Less than ten minutes later, a colored man answering the description of one of those visiting Mrs. Franke's shop, entered the grocery store of Mrs. Helen Zaroff at 200 P street northwest. She also was alone.

He ordered a bottle of soda water, she stated, and then pulled a gun.

When he grabbed $65 from the cash drawer and fled, Mrs. Zaroff said she ran to the door and screamed for help. It was reported that a policeman took out after the robber, but Second Precinct officials denied any knowledge of a chase.

Shortly before 5 p. m. two young white men walked into a High's Ice Cream store at 609 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, holding their hands in her pockets as if they had guns. They demanded the day's receipts from Mrs. Agnes Hoffman, 957 Fourteenth street southeast.

While one of the men was trying to open the cash drawer, Mrs. Hoffman related, a women entered the store, apparently unaware of what was happening. Both would-be bandits fled empty-handed.

Alcoholic Has Never Grown Up, Doctor Tells D. C. Society

Alcoholism is the product of emotional immaturity, which often traces back to "the loving dominance of parents," the District Medical Society heard last night.

Dr. Edward A. Strecker, professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania, told 100 members of the society that the typical alcoholic is an introvert "who doesn't dare face the world with his infantile emotional outlook and is unable to make decisions."

Aim of the alcoholic is to escape reality, he said, and alcohol is "the quickest and least socially reprehensible" method. "It is amazing how much society in general will tolerate from the alcoholic," he observed, "while throwing up its hands in horror when the psychotic does one-tenth as much."

Chief condition for a successful cure, he explained, "is that the patient still has some atom of intellectual recognition of his need for help and some fraction of a desire to be helped."

"We can't do much with patients who have been bullied or tricked into coming to us," he said.

The therapist's attitude must be strictly impersonal and unemotional or the patient "will be pushed further back into his immaturity," Dr. Strecker warned.

The attitude of wives of cured alcoholics is often "inexplicable," Dr. Strecker said. "In some cases there seems to be a subconscious disappointment at the cure. They seem to miss the long waiting for the husband to come home at night, the telephone calls at strange hours and the sniffing of breath. It means quite a psychological adjustment."

Benefit Rise, Pay Roll Tax Cut Sought

D. C. Compensation Board Plans Change In Face of Steadily Increasing Balance

A revival of last year's proposal of the District Unemployment Compensation Board to reduce the employer's pay-roll tax was coupled yesterday with a plan to increase benefits to the unemployed.

Faced by a huge and steadily increasing unused balance in the Treasury, the board announced it was suggesting a reduction in the pay-roll levy from 3 to 2.7 per cent, and three other amendments for the benefit of the jobless. The present balance is $16,091,000, according to John A. Marshall, executive officer of the board.

Last year a bill was introduced by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, paving the way for the reduction of the employers' tax, but no provision was made for liberalization of the act for the employe. Commissioner Hazen, chairman of the board, said the proposal would be written into a bill by Corporation Counsel Seal and sent to the Budget Bureau.

Conference Planned

The Commissioner also said a conference would be held with Representative McGehee, a member of the House District Committee, before the bill was completed.

Under the new amendments as outlined by the board members the maximum weekly payments to the unemployed would be raised from $15 to $20 and the maximum period of payment of the benefits would be increased from 16 to 20 weeks.

The third amendment would eliminate from the act the requirement that an unemployed person to be eligible for benefit payments must show he had worked 13 weeks during the 32 weeks preceding his application for the unemployment insurance. In its place, the board would require the applicant to show that he had earned $150 or more in the preceding 52 weeks.

Higher than in Most States

The executive officer said that the new maximum benefits, if approved by Congress, would be higher than that of most States. He said the reduction in the employers' tax was in line with the revised Federal Security policy. In the past calendar year the board paid out about $1,400,000 in benefits.

Clerk Gets 30 Days For Not Explaining Debt Nonpayment

Frank A. Bazata, 37, a Government clerk, yesterday held the dubious distinction of being the first to learn the Federal courts meant business in modernizing their rules recently. He spent the first day of a 30-day sentence for contempt of court in jail.

He had been ordered to explain before a notary why he had not paid a $230 judgment entered against him in Municipal Court last November. John J. O'Brien, attorney for Elva M. Hankback, of 1632 G street southeast, who brought the original suit, reported to District Court that Bazata had failed to obey the order. Bazata was sentenced for contempt by Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

The courts were authorized by the new rules of procedure to compel debtors to disclose their financial condition and to punish failure to obey as contempt.

Lions Run Up 5-0 Lead and Are Never Headed; 3d Defeat In Row for G. U.

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., Jan. 10.—Georgetown's back-sliding basketball team encountered its third straight defeat tonight when Penn State entertained a throng of 2,500 fans with a 33-to-22 victory over the Hoyas.

Victors in only two of six contests this season, the once mighty Georgetown squad was hopelessly outclassed almost from the outset of their battle with the Nitanny Lions.

Aside from a brief flurry in the second half, when the Hoyas hauled themselves to within four points of Penn State, the ultimate decision was never in doubt. When Georetown did unleash its threat, Johnny Barr countered with a scoring flurry for the Lions that clinched the game.

Christman and Barr Shine

Kerm Christman and Barr led the Lions' attack on the basket with 9 points.

Norm Racusin and Christman got in some early scoring licks that established the Lions in a 5-to-0 lead in rapid order, and, at the end of the half, Penn State had a comfortable 20-to-11 advantage.

None of the Hoyas was able to score more than two field goals. O'Grady, Lujak and Rizzi, who scored 4 points each, divided the attacking honors for Georgetown. Penn State profited from five foul goals, compared to two foul goals by Georgetown.

Duke Beats Navy in 2d Half, 40-27

Parsons Stars for Blue Devils' Quintet; Lead Changes Hands 6 Times

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—Navy fell apart in the second half to let Duke Blue Devils romp to 40-27 basketball victory today.

The Midshipmen made a fight of it in first half, a dingdong battle that saw the lead change hands six times. Navy led 18-17 at the half.

After the rest period, the lead seesawed until Duke tied it at 22-22. Then the Blue Devils, sparked by Bill Parsons, forward, began to roll.

Navy got a gift shot to make it 23-25, and did not score a point until Duke rolled up 38. The Midshipmen had a brief late flurry as Falconer and Gutting dropped in goals seconds apart, but Duke closed the scoring with a last-minute field goal.

Norman (Little Jeep) Ackley, Navy forward, led the Midshipmen throughout the scrap. Ray Brown and Parsons were scoring lights for the Carolinians, Parsons counting 10, and Brown 9. Ackley led Navy with 6 points.

The Midshipmen exhibited an improved ball club in the first half, but reverted to their poor Saturday form in the second canto. The Duke offensive fooled them repeatedly with set plays.

Coach Gets 5-Year Contract for Job At Houston; Salary Not Disclosed; Succeeds Kitts; Names Own Assistants

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., Jan. 10.—Jess Neely ended Rice's hunt for a head football coach today by accepting the institute's offer of a five-year contract. The salary was not disclosed.

The Clemson coach spent two days in conference here with Rice authorities, then went home last night for consultations with his family, friends and Clemson officials. Today he notified the Southwest Conference school he would accept.

J. T. McCants, chairman of Rice's committee on outdoor sports, would give no features of the pact with Neely, but the coach revealed in a telephone conversation from his South Carolina home that he was given a five-year contract and power to name his assistants. The most reasonable guess at salary appeared to be $7,500 annually.

Rice officials said no contract had been signed yet and "some details have to be worked out," but Neely resigned his Clemson post and was ready to report here about February 1.

Neely: "I am very happy and I'm certain everything will work out satisfactorily."

McCants: "We are delighted he is coming. Mr. Neely is a fine man and we feel he will make us a good coach."

The 42-year-old mentor has had fine success the past two years. His 1939 team shared the Southern Conference title with Duke and defeated, Boston College 6-3 in the Cotton Bowl.

Neely succeeds Jimmy Kitts, who won Rice's only two Southwest Conference championships during a six-year stretch. Kitts was fired after two successive poor seasons.

Lou Hertenberger, line coach, and his assistant, Percy Arthur, also left Rice after the past season. Hertenberger resigned, but Arthur was discharged.

Waltons Ask Funds to Feed Wild Birds

Several Thousand Reported Starving In This Vicinity

An urgent appeal for funds to purchase grain for wild birds, starving by the thousands in this vicinity because of continued snow and cold, was made last night by the D. C. chapter of the Izaak Walton League.

"In this area, both along the streams and in the fields, birds are starving and even dying because of weather conditions," De Witt Harry, president of the chapter, said last night.

The chapter donated $25 at its meeting yesterday and has asked that other contributions be sent to Washington newspapers. The Post sports department will be glad to accept any funds for the purpose. Sportsmen and others interested should address the Bird Feeding Fund, care Washington Post Sports Department, Washington, D. C.

All money received will be used for food, Harry said. Distribution of the feed will be handled gratis by the Izaak Walton League, the Audubon Society and other organizations, including the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey.

A committee named last night to handle the work includes Harold Vermeule, D. C. chapter, chairman; Dr. Paul Bartsch and G. W. Quinn, of the D. C. chapter; O. C. Fyler, Silver Spring chapter, and Dr. E. E. Huffer, Bethesda-Chevy Chase chapter.

Conn Winner In Debut as Heavyweight

Light Heavy Champ Beats Henry Cooper Over 12 Rounds

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 10.—Light Heavyweight King Billy Conn dazzled the fistic faithful in general and Henry Cooper in particular with his left hand tonight as he made his heavyweight debut in Madison Square Garden with an easy 12-round victory over the young Brooklyn belter. Conn weighed 173½; Cooper 190.

For the first five rounds, Billy, who is confident tonight's victory started him on the trail to a fight with Joe Louis and the heavyweight championship, fired hundreds of lefts and all but a very small percentage of them bounced off various parts of the Brooklyn hopeful's anatomy.

Only 5,658 Attend

In the late going, Pittsburgh's "fighting harp" tried out his right cross with similar success, but by this time these amounted only to experiments, for Billy was far ahead and only a knockout could have whipped him.

The decision was unanimous on the part of Referee Arthur Donovan and Judges George Lecron and Bill Healey. The Associated Press score card gave nine rounds to Conn and three to Cooper.

A crowd of 5,658 fans, who contributed a gross gate of $14,400, a smaller turnout than for any of Billy's previous fights in the Garden, greeted the decision with mingled boos and cheers. Apparently some didn't like the fine boxing exhibition put on by Conn, which kept the action completely devoid of blood.

Differing from his usual slow-starting tactics, Billy got away fast and was 'way out in front in the first three rounds, as he belted the 22-year-old Cooper with so many straight lefthand shots that a dull red mark appeared on the Brooklynite's forehead.

Warned For Butting

In the third, Cooper slipped to the floor as they broke out of a clinch, but it was not a knockdown.

Cooper changed his tactics in the fourth and belted away at the body. Feferee Donovan warned him for "butting" but did not take the round away.

This sudden switch by Henry caused Billy to slow up momentarily, but back he came in the fifth with his straight lefts.

Cooper went to the body attack in the sixth again, and in the ninth, after Conn had connected with hard right crosses in the seventh and eighth, Henry found something new that gave Billy a few more moments of confusion. In this session, he suddenly led three times with wild right swings and connected each time. But they stung Billy more than they hurt.

Hard Blow Landed

Cooper tried the right swing again in the tenth, but Billy bounced right back at him. Henry landed probably the most vicious blow of the bout in this round, a smashing right to the body, but it didn't appear to do any particular damage.

The left hands started to bring signs of wear and tear to Henry's face in the eleventh, and his right eye started to swell. In this heat, Billy completely outclassed his rival.

Confident after tonight's success—his only previous heavyweight start resulted in a technical knockout victory over Gus Dorazio several months ago—Billy plans to do most of his future campaigning among the heavyweights. He probably will make one more defense of his light-heavyweight title against the winner of the February 2 return bout between Fred Apostoli and Mello Bettina.

Hialeah Inaugural To Maetall, $38.40

Dewitt Page's 5-Year-Old Barely Lasts To Beat Cardinalis; Great Union Third; 20,000 Watch Start of Long Meeting

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 10.—Dewitt Page's Maetall, a 5-year-old that had finished second in his last six starts, spread over a period of three years, became the equine hero of a big opening here today when he just lasted to win the twelfth Hialeah Park Inaugural Handicap by a head. Paying $38.40 for a $2 ticket, the son of Tall Timber ran 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5 over a dull track to earn the $4,990 major share of the purse for his Bristol, Conn., owner.

P. L. Kelley's Cardinalis, grouped in the tote "field" and a handicap winner at Tropical Park a few days before, was second, three lengths clear of Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Great Union. Don Meade, who won the event a year ago astride Early Delivery, finished fourth on the favorite, Speed to Spare, after that gelding had set most of the pace.

The tropical trail led to the tall, wide gates of the Miami Jockey Club's beautiful plant. A colorful jamming crowd of 16,298 (turnstile count), or about 3,000 more than attended last year's opening, was on hand.

Young Widener Absent

A notable absentee was P. A. B. Widener, who this year begins his first season as president of the Hialeah track. His father, Joseph E., who retired from the presidency due to ill health and who is now chairman of the board, was present with Mrs. P. A. B. Widener. The latter's husband is ill in Philadelphia. Eminent figures from widely varied points and walks of life were included in the gay throng.

It was a splendid inaugural for the show place of Miami, where the meeting is expected to enjoy the marked success that attended the just closed Tropical Park session.

Counting several thousand deadheads, or tax-free spectators, the crowd was estimated at 20,000, the biggest opening on record.

The start out of the Puett gate was delayed more than six minutes when one of the 13 starters, Supremador, broke loose and ran away a couple of furlongs before being

Gelbert, 8th Nat, Puts Name On Contract

Utility Infielder Figures in Shake-Up At Short, 3d Base

Charley Gelbert, whose utility infield role proved valuable to the Nats last season, yesterday became the eighth member of the Washington club to sign a contract for 1940.

Gelbert signed the papers during a personal visit to Griffith Stadium, coming here from his Pennsylvania home.

In the muddled shortstop situation on the Washington club, Gelbert is Manager Bucky Harris' insurance that the Nats will not be without a capable shortstop.

Tentatively, Harris has assigned the regular shortstop berth to Rookie Jimmie Pofahl, costly recruit from Minneapolis. Cecil Travis, who played the position acceptably during the past three years, is being moved to third base in a maneuver that sends Buddy Lewis to the outfield.

In the event that Travis and Lewis succeed in their new jobs and Pofahl proves incapable of the shortstop position, Harris will draft Gelbert for regular shortstop duties. The veteran Gelbert last year staged a remarkable comeback in his infrequent appearances and recovered virtually the full use of the leg he wounded in a hunting accident.

Preceding the signing of Gelbert, Clark Griffith received the signed contracts of Pitcher Alex Carrasquel and Catcher Al Evans.

Brooklyn Dodgers Sign Pitcher Wes Ferrell

Former Nat Given Chance by Durocher; Failed With Yanks

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 10.—The Brooklyn Dodgers today announced they had come to terms with veteran right-hander Wes Ferrell, and that the former American Leaguer would report to the Clearawater (Fla.) training camp with the first Dodger squad, February 15.

Although Ferrell was released by the New York Yankees after a poor 1939 season, Manager Leo Durocher belives he can help the 31-year-old hurler, who said in Sarasota, Fla., the other day he'd take a minor league job if he couldn't land in the majors again.

Ferrell has pitched for the Cleveland Indians, Boston Red Sox, Washington Senators and Yankees.

His acquisition by the Dodgers perpetuates the tradition that Ferrell never has much difficulty in finding a new job in the big leagues.

After he became engaged in a salary battle with the Cleveland Indians and threatened to stay out of baseball unless they traded him, Ferrell engineered a deal that sent him to the Boston Red Sox in 1934.

In 1937 he came to Washington in a five-player trade that sent Ben Chapman and Buck Newsom to the Red Sox in exchange for the Fer-

Touchdown Club Plans To Show Official Films Of 4 Major Bowl Games

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Jan. 10.—Admitting at last that the 1939 football season is dead, Atlanta's Touchdown Club came up today with a super wake to console the rabid mourners until their fickle affections shift to 1940 spring practice.

The organization of college lettermen lined up official films on all four of the major bowl games and will show them with fixings, after a dinner at a hotel January 19 to 600 male fans of the kind who think spring, summer and winter were put on the calendar to give the coach a chance to find fresh material.

Layden to Speak

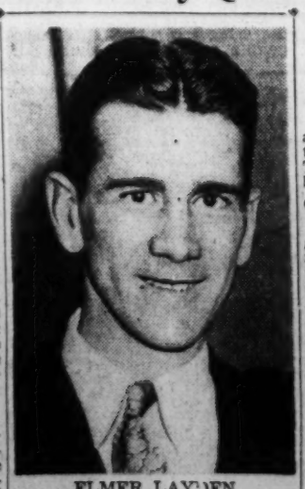
Everett Strupper, hefty club president and former Georgia Tech backfield star, gleefully announced the signing of Notre Dame's Elmer Layden as the No. 1 guest speaker and declared:

"We've got the most comprehensive bowl review ever arranged for the 'Monday quarterbacks' of any city. Remember, these aren't any old cut-down newsreel shots. They are the official, full-length movies taken by Tennessee, Tulane, Georgia Tech and Clemson and loaned to us by those schools."

Coaches Attend

Slated to explain the action and give the "inside" as each picture is run off are Tulane's Lowell Dawson, whose lads were edged in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl, 13-14, by Texas A. and M.; Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech, whose suave engineers showed Missouri down at Miami, 21-7; Jess Neely, who piloted Clemson to a 6-3 verdict over Boston College at Dallas' Cotton party; Head Coach Bob Neyland or Assistant Bill Britton of the Tennessee club that bowed to Southern California, 0-14, in the Rose tournament.

Strupper's enthusiasm for the shows seems to have been matched by the public with the ticket demand outrunning supply by about 5 to 1 (at $3 a head) and each of the club's 62 members having to duck pals he didn't cut in on his allotment of nine seats.



ELMER LAYDEN

Elmer Layden to Speak At Gala 'Stag' Dinner For 600 Rabid Fans

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"I may be as wrong as the night I tried to slug it out with Joe Louis," said Jimmy Broddock by way of prefacing his remarks, "but my hunch is that the next heavyweight champion will be a fellow who didn't win his last fight. Some day, young Pat Comiskey is going to catch up with Joe Louis. There's nobody around who can figure to beat him to it."

POVICH

Braddock, the old champ, wasn't minimizing Joe Louis. He said time would level off the difference in the comparative abilities of the champ and the young Jersey Irishman who is Braddock's choice to win the title eventually. With a bow to Louis, Braddock said the fellow who finally beats the Detroit Negro will have to have the help of the heavy hand the advancing years lay on Louis.

"This may sound all out of line, especially with young Comiskey blowing his last fight to Steve Dudas," Braddock was saying, "but I still like the kid's chances. What if he did drop the fight to Dudas? Comiskey's just a young fellow learning his way around inside the ropes. If he learned anything from that bout, and they tell me he did, Comiskey came out of it the winner. A licking at this stage of his career doesn't mean much. It probably did him some good.

Comiskey's Sock Is Most Important Item

"Dudas has been around a long time and any kid like Comiskey isn't disgraced by that kind of a fight. He had Dudas on the floor, but didn't know how to keep him down. That comes with experience. You can't take away from him the fact that he put Dudas down. That's one of the things you have to like about him. His sock."

It is strange, indeed, that Braddock sees in Comiskey the makings of a champion despite the fact that he comes pretty close to being the perfect antithesis of Braddock as a fighter. Braddock boxed his way to the title with a masterful left jab. Comiskey's left at this date is simply something he happens to have appended to his other shoulder. Comiskey is beginning his fight career strictly as a puncher.

"But he looks like the sort of a kid who will learn," Braddock was saying. "One of his troubles is that he has had too much success with his right hand. As soon as he moves up among the guys who know how to make faces at a long right-hand punch, he'll pay more attention to his left. But his right is getting better all the time. He has shortened it up, and it still carries plenty. A short right never hurt anybody. I mean it never hurt anybody who owned it.

Jim's Old Pal Handles Pat's Conqueror

"Funny thing about Comiskey. I was one of his boosters from the start and he was making me look good by winning all those fights in a row. I was getting puffed up about him. I'm around telling everybody he's a sure shot to be a champion some day and then what happens. He gets knocked off by Dudas, and who manages Dudas but my old pal and manager, Joe Gould. I never had a cross word with Gould in my life, and he does this to me."

If Jimmy Braddock ever draws on another glove it will be in fun, he was saying. Fighting as a business is behind him. He has followed the path of two other former champions into the whisky business and the increasing sales of Jimmy Braddock Whisky promise him a tidy income.

He's in Washington now in the name of Sweet Charity. He's lending his services to the Golden Gloves Tournament as referee gratis. For that sort of appearance, Braddock averages nearly $1,000 but he's paying his own expenses to appear on the card here because a generous slice of the gate will go to the Infantile Paralysis Fund.

"Talk about tough breaks," Braddock was saying, "how about the unlucky people who come down with that disease? It's like getting stabbed in the dark. I thought I was down on my luck when I was on WPA. But at least I could grab a pick and shovel. Anything I can help toss their way I sure won't miss."

Ezekiel Writhing Under Giants' Salary Pressure

The New York Giants are using the mails to defraud, according to the reports emanating from New Orleans where Zeke Bonura is writhing under the salary terms of the contract the Giants sent him with the help of Uncle Sam's postman. It has leaked out that Bonura's papers call for an $11,000 salary, $4,000 less than he received in 1939.

At those figures, it appears that the Giants have a hold-out on their hands because Big Zeke has interests other than baseball and is one of the few big leaguers who could make a threat to stay out of the game stick. He can step into his father's wholesale fruit business with no loss of income whatsoever.

The paradox is, however, that the Giants are slashing Bonura's salary despite the fact that he led the club in hitting, in runs driven in and in various other departments. On the surface, he appears to be a valuable man to the New York club. But Manager Bill Terry, who dictates his players' salary terms, thinks otherwise. He remembers that Bonura couldn't buy a hit in the last two months of the season and he recalls also that Bonura's line of chatter was no help in fielding a ground ball hit toward first base.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 10.—Notes so hot:

Jack Kearns is sunning himself on Jacobs Beach these days, looking for a "cut" of those sensational Dempsey-Willard fight pictures. . . . And not an 8-millimeter one either . . . Dempsey, by way, while waitng for that clipper to take off from San Francisco on his recent trip to Manila, got an injunction against the showing of the films in San Francisco. . . . the gossip around the beach is that neither the man mauler nor the man who made him champion have any true legal claim to the shocking reel—which promises to make a sensational amount of money . . . in some places audiences have stood up and actually cheered the savage-looking Dempsey, with the convict haircut and broken nose, and everywhere they are gasping at the semimurderous liberties Dempsey took with the Marquis of Queensberry's rules that day in Toledo.

CONSIDINE

From Bob Crosby, the old Gonzaga College flash who is making sweet music these blustery nights at the Hotel New Yorker, we learn the story of his brother Bing's breathless swoop into racetrack ownership . . . when the original promoters of the Del Mar Track approached Bing his contribution was to be mainly his name and, incidentally, $6,000 . . . he became so interested in the track's possibilities, however, that he invited his friends to invest in it . . . his valet put up $100, and many others gave amounts of that general size.

Crosby Saves Money for Others

Then one day Crosby's lawyers called and told him that a deal by which the WPA was going to help build the track had fallen through. . . . They added that he was lucky to get out with only a $6,000 loss.

"What about the others?" Bing asked, and he was told that they'd lose their dough, too . . . Bing swallowed and, to his counselor's dismay, said he was going to go through with it . . . it cost him all he could raise . . . $425,000, his life's pile . . . the track had to do an $80,000 business day to exist . . . the first year it did $100,000 a day, and this season twice that . . . a nice break for a nice game guy.

The year 1940 might be a nice one for the N. B. A. and New York State Athletic Commission to get together and decide, for once and for all, just who is the world's champion middleweight and the world's champion bantam . . . it makes boxing as cheap as rassling, to have duplication—as well as duplicity . . . Walter Johnson will run for Congress, and is expected to shut out his Democrat opponent . . . Bill McCarney, the great old manager, did a fine thing in voluntarily letting Steve Dudas go . . He couldn't get him as much work as Dudas wanted, and felt that the fighter was unhappy . . . McCarney had trouble getting Dudas to go over to Joe Gould (the manager who got him the opportunity to beat Pat Comisky) because Dudas was sore at Jim Braddock, Gould's partner, for ribbing him . . . Oscar Vitt and the Cleveland baseball writers have not been so friendly since he traded Averill.

Jacobs Plans Daytime Fight

Mike Jacobs' plan to stage a Conn-Apostoli fight in the Orange Bowl some Sunday afternoon late in February or early in March, for the infantile paralysis fund, brings to mind the complete manner in which day-time fighting has passed into limbo . . . the last day-time fight of remote importance was February 22, 1938, when Apostoli was beaten by young Corbett 3d in San Francisco.

One of the great future success stories of sports will be the Saga Clayton Heafner, the young Charlotte (N. C.), pro who nearly won the Los Angeles Open . . . The current issue of "golf" traces his career for the time he was a village tough to the present . . . He was so poor he couldn't buy a golf club, never had a pair of spikes until more or less recently . . . before the open (wherein he shot a record-equaling 66 to give the leaders a scare) he shot a 60, and this past fall he won the Blue Hills Open at Roanoke, Va., by shooting the last nine holes in 29 . . . by the way, whatever became of John Montague?

Gonzaga Rally Beats Tech; Eastern Trips G. W. in Overtime

Elongated Pivot Man Scores 13 Points; Tech Leads, 13-8 After Two Periods

One of the greatest single performances of the scholastic cage year was turned in yesterday by Lane O'Donnell, Gonzaga High football and basketball star, as he led his Purple cagers in a rally and 25-19 victory over McKinley High at Tech gym.

Scoring all but one of his team's points in the first half, after which it was on the short end of a 13-8 count, O'Donnell continued his streak in the final two periods to give Gonzaga its third victory in six games. In all, Lane hit the loop for 13 points, and if there was a more valuable defensive player on the floor the 300-odd spectators didn't see him.

What points the lanky doctor's son—who started the season with an injured knee and still feels the bruised member—didn't score he managed to give an assist. He took the ball off both blackboards, his bullet-like passes setting up most of the baskets of his mates.

General ineffectiveness struck the whole Purple squad with the exception of O'Donnell in the first half. It trailed 6-4 after one quarter and Tech's 5-point edge at intermission appeared good for the game.

Tech clung to its advantage for half the third session, but a newcomer to Gonzaga, young Bob Rowzie, went into action then and knotted the count at 15-15 with two quick field goals. It was O'Donnell who gave Gonzaga a 16-15 lead for the quarter when he sank his only foul point of the game.

Still unworried about the outcome, Tech struck back and snatched a 19-16 margin before the final period was two minutes old. Freddy Rice and Franny Counsilman ruined that with five fast points and Tech brought up the rear, 21-19. That was all the Purple needed. O'Donnell's two clincher baskets stifled whatever hopes the Maroon still entertained.

Unhappy Landings for Pair of Golden Glovers

Gloves Bouts Dominated By Knockouts

Braddock Knee Deep In Victims; 1,000 See Opening Battles; Few Go the Route

Knockouts lurked in every corner of the ring at Turner's Arena last night as 24 amateur fighters squared off in the first Simon-pure boxing tournament of 1940 under the watchful eyes of Jim Braddock, former world's heavyweight champion.

Occasion was the inaugural of the seventh annual Golden Gloves boxing tourney, and Braddock, there to strike a blow in the battle against infantile paralysis, saw some of the wildest fighting he has ever had occasion to referee.

Melvin Smith, unattached, entered in the 135-pound novice class, was carried from the ring by his handlers after an old kidney ailment disabled him a few blows after the opening bell of his battle with Bill Purdy, of Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5.

Purdy was awarded a technical knockout victory, and Smith, who fainted when carried to his corner, was taken into the dressing room. He was said not to be seriously injured.

Braddock Counts 10

Braddock's first duty consisted of counting up to 10 over the sagging form of Joe Campbell, of Colmar A. C., who was knocked out by Dick Tracy, unattached, in 1 minute 55 seconds of the first round. Tracy chased Campbell all over the ring and had him helplessly covering before he nailed him with an overhand right.

It was not until the second round of the second bout he presided over that the former champion remembered to remove a large ring from

District's No. 1 Gridman Gets McDonald Cup

District college football coaches are scheduled for a meeting this week-end to decide the outstanding gridder in town over the past season, who will receive the Arch McDonald trophy at the fourth annual Touchdown Club banquet next Tuesday night.

The McDonald trophy is the most popular of the local awards to be made at the banquet. Those in the running include Bob Nowaskey, George Washington; Augie Lio, Georgetown; Rosso Pirro, Catholic; George Brown, American, and Francis Beamer and Joe Murphy, Maryland.

Georgetown is the only one that has not selected the most valuable player to the team. Maryland has picked Ralph Albarno, C. U.; Pete Sachon, George Washington; Murphy Booth, and American, George Brown. They will receive trophies donated by George Marshall.

Brewers Play In Baltimore

Heurich Brewers will continue their procourt schedule in Baltimore tomorrow night when they meet the Baltimore Clippers at the Coliseum, at 8:30 o'clock.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Brewers will entertain the formidable Troy-Celtics, of Troy, N. Y., at Heurich Gymnasium.

The Brewers have defeated Baltimore twice previously this season. The locals will be pointing for their ninth victory in ten home starts when they meet the Troy-Celtics Sunday.

Bunsa's Return Tonic To C. U. Ring Team

JOE BUNSA

If the physicians who saw Joe Bunsa through a desperate fight for his life two years ago could have seen the 155-pound captain of Catholic University's boxing team in action yesterday, no doubt they would have lapsed into the vernacular of the fight ring and boserved:

"There's a guy who not only can take it, but also can dish it out."

Bunsa, one of the most promising boxers in collegiate competition until illness cut him down, put on his snappiest workout of the season yesterday with — of all persons — Julius Stanges, 195-pound heavyweight, who went undefeated for the Cards last year.

Bunsa's performance served notice that he is ready to take his share of the load Saturday night when C. U. opens its 1940 boxing season against Miami University, of Coral Gables, Fla.

Joe's Well Again

No traces of the ill effects which naturally slowed him up all last year—although he lost only one decision—were apparent as Joe spotted the big Detroit boxer some 40 pounds and then tore into him with an attack which had Stanges hanging on. Just for his own enjoyment, and to prove he can "take it," Bunsa absorbed some of Stanges' more lethal punches and only grinned.

It was a workout that was more like a toe-to-toe slugfest than a practice session. Stanges, still favoring an injured knee suffered in the Sun Bowl football game, is unable to move around with much speed and consequently both boys did a minimum of dancing about.

Joe's display brought smiles to the face of Coach Eddie LaFond, for just two years ago Bunsa was floored by a strange stomach ailment which resulted from internal injuries suffered in a foot ball game.

He was first taken to the college infirmary, then to Emergency Hospital. Some of the city's outstanding medical minds were at a loss to diagnose Bunsa's malady, and twice his life was dispaired of. But Joe wouldn't give up.

A Gloomy Outlook

When he was back on his feet he had lost 40 pounds, and it appeared that his days in college athletics might be over. But he had a daily routine of exercises, maintained a rigid diet. About midway of last year's boxing season Joe was back at Brookland gymnasium demanding to be in the thick of the fighting.

Saturday Joe will be up against Miami's 155-pounder, Joe Bonano, but this time he'll be ready. He has a season of football behind him and despite the fact that he has been largely occupied with football he has been drilling for the boxing season steadily—even while on the football trip to El Paso, Tex.

Columbus U. Host To Miami Boxers In Opening Match

Columbus University's Fighting Explorers, prepared to inaugurate their tenth year in competitive boxing, will make their 1940 debut at Joe Turner's Arena Tuesday night when they entertain the Golden Hurricane, of Miami University, at 8:30 o'clock.

Miami University opens its District invasion at Brookland Stadium Saturday night when it opposes Catholic University's Cardinals.

Inasmuch as Columbus U. and the Cardinals are to meet at Brookland gymnasium for the first time on the night of February 3, the matches are expected to provide a direct line on their relative strength.

Although the Explorers have lost a majority of last years veterans through graduation, they will return four fighting favorites in Phil Appel, 115 pounds; Buddy Lazear, 145 pounds; Bill Crum, 165 pounds, and Lou Hayman, 175 pounds.

Clemson, S. C., Jan. 10 (AP).—Miami University boxers defeated Clemson, 4½ to 3½, tonight. The match was tied through the light-heavyweight bout. Clemsan's Warren Wilson, spotting Heavyweight Kearn 33 pounds, lost the deciding contest.

Tide Scores, 32-30, on Goal By Hartley

Two Extra Periods Needed for Champs Win Over Alexandria; Eastern Uses 13 Men

Eastern High cagemen resorted to two overtime periods—the first of the schoolboy season—to earn a 32-20 victory over George Washington High yesterday at Alexandria.

Rex Hartley, spindley center, registered the winning goal in two minutes of the second period after the first three-minute session had ended scoreless. It was the second triomph over the Alexandrians for Eastern this season, the first a 26-14 beating almost a month ago.

Thirteen Tide players were thrown into the fray by Coach John MacBride, and as usual Bob (Gun) Custer emerged with high scoring honors. His 15 points edged out Amon Clift, center of the Presidents, by a single field goal. Of the six other scorers for Eastern, Hartley, Moe Shulman and George Pigott stood out with four points apiece.

Eastern's stretch-running five was forced to turn on the heat in the final quarter to earn a 30-30 deadlock at the end of regulation time. With a second string holding the fort the Tide was behind, 1-6, after the first quarter. It came back somewhat before the half for a 12-13 deficit, but again faded to trail by 18-21 after three quarters. Then Custer and his mates settled down to wind up the game with a flourish.

Padgett Picks Cards To Win N. L. Flag

By the Associated Press

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 10.—The St. Louis Cardinals are early season favorites down here to dethrone the Cincinnati Reds in the 1940 National League pennant race.

Don Padgett, who might be a little prejudiced since he's first-string catcher for the Gas House gang, said so today.

"I don't see how we can miss," said the receiver, whose 1939 batting average of .399 in 92 games is almost as large as his 218-pound 6-foot 2-inch frame.

"Our outfield is set. Ducky Medwick should go great again—and by the way, the fans in St. Louis would never let Medwick be traded, unless something as good as Medwick is received in return. That won't happen.

"As for the rest of the team, a couple of good pitchers and a keystone man for our infield and we'll be ready to go to town. Remember that it wos only the bad first month that ruined us last season. The Reds got off to a 12-game lead and 12 games is 12 games in anybody's league.

"We were slow in getting started and then almost overtook Cincinnati. If we could have licked them that first day of our important four-game series, we'd have won the pennant. They were scared stiff."

Padgett is modest about his hitting.

"Oh, I manage to hit a few," he admitted, and that drew a laugh from Joe Stripp, former major league third baseman who runs a baseball school here and for whom Don is an instructor.

"Yeah, this guy manages to hit a few," Stripp mimiced.

"Say, that's all this guy does is hit. He lost so many balls for me last year that Branch Rickey oughta send me a dozen or two down here before I go bankrupt."

Medwick, Mize Unsigned; Both Want Increases

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 10.—The No. 1 of the St. Louis Cardinals has gone to Florida without signing a contract and today the No. 2 failed to reach an agreement with Vice President Branch Rickey.

Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize, called the National Leagues best one-two batting punch, probably will test all of Rickeys' persuasiveness before matters are settled with their signatures.

Mize was reported to have received $15,000 last season and friends said he wanted to get into the same bracket with higher-paid Medwick for 1940. His contract parley was adjourned to permit Rickey keep another appointment.

Medwick, who is demanding an increase over his 1939 salary of $18,000, went South several days ago after failing to agree to terms with Rickey. He is on the "faculty" of a baseball school at Orlando, Fla.

Furr Pads Glove Illegally, Fight Manager Says

Charges that Phil Furr is paving his comeback trail in Washington with an old fight trick known as "leading the mitt' was hurled yesterday by Eddie Walker, manager of Milo Theodorescue, in a letter to Heinie Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission.

Walker accused Furr of using extra layers of cotton and bandage on his right hand in such a way as to add power to his punches.

"Furr is still favoring that hand he broke two years ago in the Ceferino Garcia fight, and the way he's doing it isn't legal," Walker complained.

Furr promptly volunteered to let Walker supervise bandaging of his hands when he meets Theodorescue Monday night in Turner's Arena in the eight-round headline bout and denied assertions that his right hand still gives him trouble. Miller informed Walker the commission will look out for his interests Monday night.

Rally by Harvard Beats Columbia, 40-35

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—A frenzied rally in the closing minutes of a keenly fought game enabled Harvard's basketball team to down Columbia, 40 to 35, in the Columbia gymnasium tonight.

It was the Eastern Intercollegiate League bow for both teams.

With the lead changing constantly it was anybody's game two minutes from the close, when the score was deadlocked, 35 to 35.

Polaris Annexes Fair Grounds Feature in Blanket Finish

Mascot and Our Crest in Cash Picture

Keiper Gives Good Ride on $7.40 Shot; Vedder Also Stars At New Orleans

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, La., Jan. 10.—Flashing a burst of speed that brought him to the wire with two others in a blanket finish, Polaris, 6-year-old chestnut gelding stuck his head out far enough to take a photographer's decision in the featured sixth race at the Fair Grounds today.

The property of Mrs. J. C. Sawyer, Polaris, who finished fourth in his last outing, made his bid in the stretch run to take the lead away from Our Crest, the pacemaker for half of the 6 furlongs. Mascot, who also made a fine try for the large end of the $600 purse finished second, with Carnarvon in the show slot.

Jockey P. Keiper, who rode Polaris and R. L. Vedder, between themselves accounted for four of the day's card of seven races. Keiper also rode Pop's Rival in the third, while Vedder saddled Fancy That in the first and Nemont in the fifth.

Polaris ran the distance in 1:13 2-5 and paid $7.40 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

Hammerstrom Offered Contract

By the Associated Press

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Sam Hammerstrom, captain of Union College's undefeated football team and a member of the Associated Press "Little All-America," said he received a contract today to play professional football with the New York Giants in 1940.

Hammerstrom is "considering" the offer, which he said mentioned a "substantial" figure, but explained he would rather have a teaching position in which he could coach a high school, preparatory or college freshman team.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCE CUT, $34.50, $16.60, $9.10; SUBURA, $9.60, $5.80; RED MANTILLA, $9.10.
CHANCE CUT, breaking cleanly, went in near pursuit of the leaders on the extreme outside, responded with determination to pressure through the stretch and won going away. SUBURA, away forwardly, went prominently all the way, and took a brief lead, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. RED MANTILLA, quickest away, bore out sharply after the start and faltered when it came to a drive. BELMAR ARRA suffered some trouble in the opening furlong. MISS JAFFA, slow to begin and weakly ridden, was never formidable.

SECOND RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate for all but No Ending. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:31. SUN APOLLO, under stout restraint while in tight quarters until the stretch turn, where he slipped through and opened up a good lead with a rush to win decisively. STEEL KING displayed nice speed, but was no match for the winner. BACHELOR'S BOWER gradually worked his way up on the outside easily. DEDUCE quit. CHANCE KING bled.

Daily Double, CHANCE CUT and SUN APOLLO, Paid $147.30

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Tamiami. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate for all but Don Bescombe. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:02. BAY CARSE, on the outside in the opening half mile, stole through next to the inner rail entering the stretch and moved up with determination to win in hand. SACK, beginning fast, set a steady pace in the early stages, held on with good courage when it came to a drive and outstayed STAGE FRIGHT. The latter followed the pace under steady restraint, but flattened out as if short when placed to pressure. LITTLE BOLO had no mishaps.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:31½. Winner, E. C. FLORAGINA, displaying keen speed, drew clear at the first turn, saved ground thereafter and handily held sway. INDIAN LODGE, very hard ridden, followed the winner on the inside the entire trip, but could not better his position. THE THRUSH, outrun in the early stages, came to the outside in the last furlong and closed with a rush. FLYING UP faltered in the final drive. BUCKING could never reach contention.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Naples. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:02. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT MORSE (entry), $3.20, $2.50, $2.20; MAR LE, $7.50, $3.90; DOLLY VAL, $2.90.
COUNT MORSE, hustled to the front in the run out of the chute, displayed keen speed while saving ground, but was ridden out briskly through the stretch to maintain his lead. MAR LE, a forward contender all the way, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted DOLLY VAL. The latter, slow to get going, improved her position gradually on the inside and finished in very tight quarters. With clear passage through the stretch she may have won. EASY MON did not seem partial to the footing.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Hialeah Inaugural Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:39. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAETALL, $38.40, $16.40, $9.10; CARDINALIS (field), $5.00, $3.80; GREAT UNION, $8.00.
MAETALL, forcing a swift pace from start, raced SPEED TO SPARE into submission, continued courageously and just lasted long enough to withstand CARDINALIS' bid. The latter, a forward contender throughout, made a game effort when the final test came and just failed to set up. GREAT UNION, well placed early, responded gamely when placed to drive and wore SPEED TO SPARE down in the last strides. SPEED TO SPARE set a rapid pace while saving ground, but faltered in the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate for all but Conrad Mann. Won driving; place same. WHITE GINGER, under steadying restraint until well straightened into the stretch, closed gamely and outlasted SUN MICA. The latter, used up racing JOHN ALLEN into defeat, hung when the real test came. WILLIAM PALMER, away slowly, closed an immense gap and ran as if beat. SYMPHON finished with good courage. PALAMEDE could not get up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:37½. Off 5:38. Winner, P. L. MEMORY BOOK moved into contention rapidly approaching the half-mile pole, saved much ground entering the stretch, opened up a commanding lead and won in hand. BALLOTER, going forwardly under light restraint, made a game effort, but could not get up. MUCHO GUSTO held the field safe for speed, but bore out badly entering the stretch and came again when straightened out to outstay SOLARIUM. The latter faltered in the final furlong as if short.

Women May Split Golf Fields

Recommend 1940 Events On 2 Courses

Speccial Tournament Committee Votes To Divide High And Low Handicaps

A special tournament committee of the District Women's Golf Association met at the home of Chairman Mrs. H. A. Knox yesterday and by a unanimous vote recommended to the executive committee that excepting the city championship every tournament in 1940 be played on two courses, in two handicap groups.

The committee was named by Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the association, to do something about the large fields for the local women's trophy tournaments. They overcrowded the courses last year and when the entries neared the 200 mark for each cup event the executive committee called for a method of dividing or rearranging the field.

The special committee's decision is not final, but will be submitted to the first executive committee meeting of 1940, Monday, January 29, for the final vote

The recommendation is that the 1 to 18 handicap players will play on one course, for the main trophy and other prizes, while on the same day the 19 to 36 handicappers will play on another course for suitable awards.

The other, and believed to be the most popular division before yesterday's meeting, was to have the field play on two days over the same course. Under the new setup, the 19 to 36 handicap players, almost half the membership of the association, will have no say as to the disposition of the main trophy, although the prizes will be equal. For instance, The Washington Post trophy champion would be the low net scorer in the low handicap group, while the best among the higher handicapped players would receive prizes. The high handicap players will not be eligible for low gross.

The District championship, only match-play event on the card, will be left alone.

The officers and the golf committee chairman of each club, the executive committee, will vote on this and other matters at the January 29 meeting, when the members of the other committees for the year will be named. M. W. W.

Dick Lanahan Signed to Pirate Contract for '40

Pittsburgh, Jan. 10 (AP).—Signing of Pitcher Richard A. (Dick) Lanahan, of Washington, today brought to 12 the number of Pirate players under contract for 1940. The lefthander is considered one of the prize packages of last October's draft, being selected from Chattanooga of the Southern Association. He won 19 games against 11 defeats last year.

Lanahan, who graduated from Eastern High School in Washington, where he was an outstanding scholastic and sandlot pitcher, jumped directly into Class A Southern Association ball. On the strength of his impressive pitching with Chattanooga, Lanahan received two trials with the Washington club, but was returned to the minors when he showed no ability to curb his wildness. Last season for the first time, he exhibited moderate control.

Ferrell Signs With Brooklyn

rell brothers and Outfielder Mel Almada.

Unable to win consistently for the Nats. Ferrel was given his unconditional release by the Washington club in 1938 and within 24 hours was signed by the New York Yankees in time to figure in a share of the World Series spoils.

Since 1933 when an arm ailment robbed him of a fast ball that was one of the wonders of the league, Ferrell has been relying chiefly on a slow curve and "control" pitching.

Last spring in the camp of the Yankees it was reported that Ferrell had in some manner recovered his fast ball and he enjoyed startling success in exhibition games. However, a few weeks after the season started he had failed to prove of any help to the Yankees and was given his release.

During most of 1938, Ferrell was in retirement at his North Carolina home, making no attempt to obtain another baseball job.

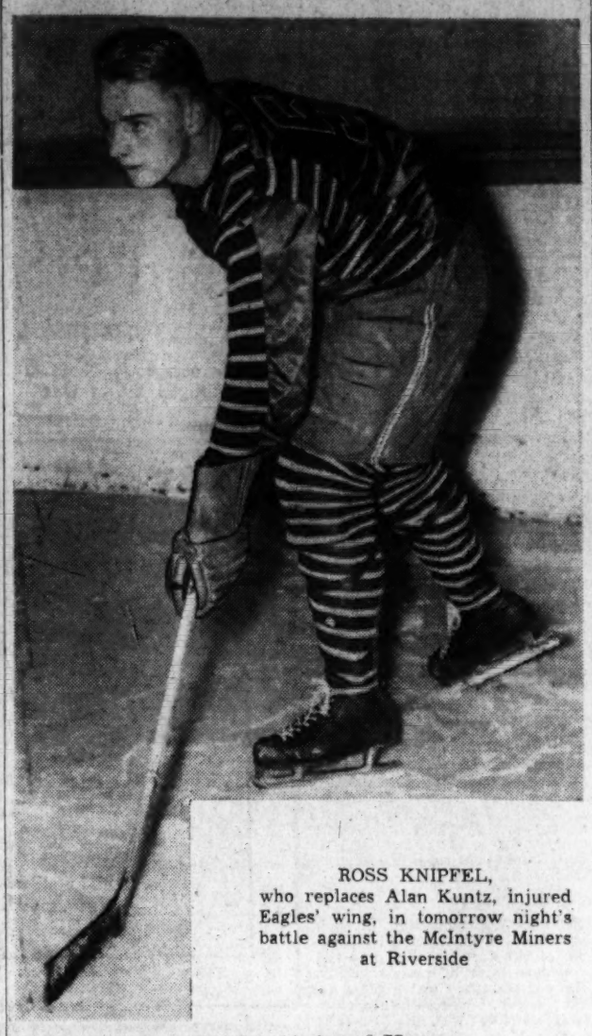
Canadian Stickmen Meet Eagles Tomorrow



ROSS KNIPFEL, who replaces Alan Kuntz, injured Eagles' wing, in tomorrow night's battle against the McIntyre Miners at Riverside

Knipfel to Replace Injured Kuntz At Wing; Latter Lost for 6 Weeks; Percentage of Gate to Finnish Fund

Alan Kuntz, swift skating and high scoring wingman of the Washington Eagles, will be lost to his team for at least six weeks and probably for the remainder of the season.

Kuntz was ordered to bed until the swelling in his wrist subsided.

Ross Knipfel, husky, blond youngster, will replace Kuntz at left wing in one of the forward combinations tomorrow night when the Eagles entertain the powerful McIntyre Miners, pace setters of the Northern Ontario Hockey League, at Riverside Stadium in an 8:30 o'clock Eastern Amateur Hockey League match that donates 10 per cent of its gross receipts to the Finnish relief fund.

The Finnish Fund match also provides an opportunity for Bill Lahti, right wingman, to abandon the sidelines and he may be used in a forward line otherwise comprised of Bill Cairns and Ken Partis.

The Eagles, in the meantime, are seeking the services of an outstanding Canadian amateur player, but as yet have received no assurance that he is available.

Tomorrow night's match for the Finnish Relief Fund will introduce in the McIntyre Miners a team that has gone undefeated in northern Ontario Hockey League competition and which is ranked on a par with the Toronto Goodyears and Montreal Royals, who have defeated the Eagles by scores of 6 to 2 and 8 to 4, respectively.

$5,000 Oakland Open to Be Played Over Soggy Course

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 10.—Steady rain soaked the Sequoyah course where the $5,000 Oakland 72-hole Medal Play Tournament starts tomorrow. Small lakes appeared on low level greens but those in charge agreed the golf show must go on.

With few exceptions, the celebrities of the professional golfing world were on hand.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—The McIntyre Miners, touring Canadian hockey team, grabbed the first of a five-game series with clubs of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League tonight, defeating the Baltimore Orioles, 5 to 2.

One battle livened the activities, Dyte and Mann each drawing 5-minute penalties for fighting.

The miners gave the Orioles a head start in the first frame, then smashed through five successive goals to clinch the decision. With their cause lost, Ripley, Vitarelli and Calladine teamed in the third period to score Baltimore's second and final goal.

Galento-Baer Bout Hits Snag Due to Jacobs

N. Y. Commission Gives Battle O. K.; but Bans Pilot Backed by Tony

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 9.—The New York State athletic commission gave its blessing and a slap in the face to Tony Galento-Max Baer charity bout in 10 minutes of merry-go-round action today.

They first said they would approve a March 4 Galento-Baer battle here for the joint benefit of the fight infantile paralysis and Finnish relief funds.

Then the fistic fathers turned right around and flatly refused to reinsate Joe Jacobs, Galento's manager, whose license was revoked last fall. Galento, at present, also is without a license to box in this State, but the commissioners said they would grant him a permit to tangle with California Max.

The commission said it would take no action on Joe Jacob's case at "the present time." To queries as to just when Joe might expect reinstatement, the commissioners pointed out that "there may be a new commission a few years from now."

Jacobs repeated previous statements that Galento would refuse to fight in New York unless Joe was in his corner, and pointed out that since he had been punished with revocation of his license since last fall, he felt the commission could "bury the hatchet" now.

Knockouts Abound In Golden Gloves

his left hand—a move which brought out more clearly than anything else that Jim was out to look out for the good of the fighters.

One of the wierdest second rounds ever seen in Turner's Arena was the one which found Benny Frady, of Pete's A. C., dancing like a nervous jitterbug and peppering William Golding, unattached, almost at will. He had Golding groggy but had to be satisfied with a decision.

Upward of 1,000 fans kept the rafters ringing as the novice fighters, striving for a chance to represent the District in national competition, kept flinging punches from bell to bell in the 12 three-round fights. A portion of the $461 gate went to the infantile paralysis fund.

Although Braddock refereed only three fights—in the 126-pound class—liveliest action came in the 135-pound class. Every one of the four bouts ended in a technical knockout.

But the most bitter battle of the night was the 126-pound fiasco between Bernie Cady and Huck Wright, both unattached. Braddock was hard put to keep the two eager youngsters apart and repeatedly warned Wright for infractions of the rules.

Cady drew blood from Wright's nose in the second round, and from that point it was a backroom brawl type of fight. Cady had Wright hanging on glassily in the second, but had to take a decision and be happy.

118 pounds—Charles Petro (M. P. B. C.) No. 5) knocked out Mario Mercilliott (unattached), 1 minute, second round.

C.) decisioned William Scott (M. P. B. C. No. 5). Bernie Cady (unattached) decisioned Huck Wright (unattached).

British Wheat Buying Lifts Chicago Prices

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Wheat prices swung erratically within a 2 cent range today, but finally finished with moderate gains. More intensive sea and air warfare and big purchases of Canadian wheat by England encouraged the upturn, which, however, was held in check much of the time by more favorable domestic crop reports.

News that Great Britain had purchased about 20,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat overnight and today, however, started prices upward, May reaching 1.02½ and July 99⅝, up a cent, before profit-taking in the last few minutes wiped out part of the gain.

Wheat on the board of trade closed ⅜@¾ higher, May 1.02@1.02⅛, July 99¼@99¼, corn ⅛@⅜ down, May 58@58⅛, July 58⅝, oats ¼ higher, soy beans ¼ up, rye ¼ up, lard 2 to 3 cents a hundredweight lower.

Retail Advertising 1.6% Above 1938

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Winding up 1939 with a gain of 190,000 lines over the corresponding week of 1938, retail newspaper advertising in 78 major cities during the year exceeded that of 1938 by 15,598,794 lines, an increase of 1.6 per cent, according to Advertising Age.

An analysis of the relation existing between volume of retail newspaper advertising and the state of retail trade has revealed a close correlation of the two, according to Advertising Age, so that the increase in newspaper advertising, although comparatively small, indicates a similar increase in retail business volume.

Electric Output Reaches New High After Holiday Lull

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Electric power production snapped out of the holiday lull at a faster rate than seasonally anticipated, figures released today by the Edison Electric Institute indicated.

Power output for the week ended January 6 amounted to 2,473,397,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 2.9 per cent from 2,404,316,000 in the last week of 1939. This represented a jump of 14 per cent from 2,169,470,000 in the comparable 1939 week.

The increase carried the Associated Press electric energy index to a new high for 1939-'40 at 130.5. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-time trends and based on 1929-1930 as 100, stood at 129.3 in the previous week and 117.2 a year ago.

Boston, Jan. 10 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Trading in wool was in very light volume today. Small lots were moved occasionally, but the aggregate volume of sales was too small to establish market prices. Holders of greasy shorn domestic wools were not inclined to change asking prices from levels they have been quoting for several weeks. Buyers who were making bids on sizable weights offered prices that were unacceptable to holders.

Price Trend Is Firm but Indefinite; Food Shares Exhibit Degree of Strength; Foreign Dollar Bonds in Moderate Demand

New York, Jan. 10.—Advances were more numerbus than declines by a small margin in security dealings today, but irregularity and indefiniteness characterized the session with only the food shares showing buoyancy as a group, although some of the aviations spurted a little on new and optimistic forecasts of probable allied purchases of airplanes in this country.

Only a few of the recognized market leaders were active in big board trades and low-priced issues once again accounted for the bulk of the day's turnover of just under 600,000 shares. Standard Brands, with sales of 25,200 shares up ⅝ to close at 6¾, led the list. It was one of the seven of the 15 most active shares selling around 10 or lower. Curtiss-Wright, the most heavily traded aviation issue, was unchanged on the day but some other members of the group gained, including a 1⅞ point rise for Douglas.

South Puerto Rico Sugar Strong

South Puerto Rico Sugar preferred made a new high at 146¾, up 2, and Crown Cork & Seal gained the same amount. United Plywood recorded one of the sharpest losses, of 3 points. Chrysler added half a point, while General Motors was unchanged. Bethlehem was up a fraction, while Steel common eased an eighth.

Railroad issues were barely steady. Coppers and oils moved in close limits. Some of the utilities were firm, but these were mostly senior shares. Mail order issues held well, while in the silver group U. S. Smelting was down a point.

There were several reasons to account for the continuance of the market stalemate. Analysis by brokers and financial commentators of the Jackson Day speeches, including that by President Roosevelt, appeared to agree that nothing has been said to allay the suspicion—and in some cases fear—that a third term is a distinct possibility. Some of the commentators go so far as to suggest that domestic and foreign situations will have an all important bearing on the President's decision whether to run or not to run. If prosperity comes riding in on the rush of business that, in part at least, has resulted from Europe's dire straits, some feel a third term will be sought.

War and the Future

Beyond any temporary advantage which an industrially active United States will have over war-torn countries, however, other analysts are making doleful predictions of what may happen when the war ends, this year or further in the future. The gravity of the situation from Great Britain's viewpoint, was emphasized by Prime Minister Chamberlain in his speech earlier in the week. This warned that people of the empire must make greater sacrifices and intimated that so far the war's preliminaries have only been passed.

While the war and the possibility of a third term are the dominant market factors, a majority of the brokers insist that a substantial drop in business activity from current levels has already been discounted. Attention is being focused on steel, more particularly, as this industry has probably been stimulated more than any other by war psychology, and has actually benefited by new business from neutral countries whose supplies were formerly obtained from the now belligerent nations. There was a lot about steel in the news today. Iron Age reported authoritatively that production and shipments are running double the rate of incoming orders. At the same time it admitted this condition may be temporary, as large-scale buying is expected in some quarters by February, and no sign has been given of an actual drop in consumption. U. S. Steel, meanwhile, reported December shipments of finished products in the largest volume for any month since April 1937. Despite these heavy deliveries, it was suggested by commentators, the steel companies still have considerable cut-price tonnage to be rolled, representing business booked in the third quarter last year.

Prime Bonds Firm in Dull Trading

Listed bond trading remained quiet today, with high grade investment issues in demand, while speculative bonds displayed a little irregularity. The quick disappearance of new offerings of investment bonds turns attention regularly to the outstanding and listed obligations, but offerings are small and not much business can be done. The speculative group naturally tend to follow any precedent that the equities department may set. Foreign dollar issues were in fair request, but added little to the turnover, which totaled $5,830,000.

Small fractional advances were reported in long term United States Treasury bonds.

Cotton Futures Rest Following Swift Advance

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The cotton futures market appeared out of breath today after the fast sprints of the last few weeks. The market closed 4 points higher to 2 lower.

Cotton men said the price list seemed to have adjusted itself to the latest news from Washington and abroad affecting the staple. What traders now need for another go at the market, they added, was a fresh incentive.

Phelps Dodge Building Tin Refinery in N. Y.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Corporation, a leading producer of domestic copper, will soon be refining tin in Long Island. Metropolitan Bank Marks 126th Birthday

Oldest D. C. National Bank Has Survived 4 Wars and 8 Panics

With C. F. Jacobsen, tenth president, the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington is observing today its 126th anniversary as a banking institution.

The bank was organized at a meeting of the directors on January 1, 1814. The first board included Gen. Van Ness and William Brent, who are mentioned in Elliott's Washington Guide of 1937 as "having contributed by their wealth, talents and industry to the formation of our infant metropolis," the population of which at that time was 13,247.

The bank was first known as "The Bank of the Metropolis" and its first banking house was at the northeast corner of F and Fifteenth streets. The bank site remained at the corner until July, 1836, when a new banking house was built on its present location, which eventually gave way in 1907 to the present banking and office building.

Oldest D. C. National Bank

The Act of Congress to incorporate National Banking Associations was passed on June 3, 1864; and on March 24, 1865 the bank was reorganized under the name of "The National Metropolitan Bank of Washington" and enjoys the distinction of now being the oldest national bank in the District of Columbia.

On October 18, 1904 the bank took over the property and assets of the Citizens National Bank and changed its name to the "National Metropolitan-Citizens Bank of Washington" and on January 10, 1906 the name was changed to the present title of "The National Metropolitan Bank of Washington."

Eminent Directors

From its first foundation the bank has enjoyed the counsel and assistance of the foremost business and professional men of the community. Col. James Munroe was made a director in 1815, while filling the office of Secretary of State, and at a later time are found the names of Josiah Meigs, commissioner of the land office and the first president of the University of Georgia; Col. John Tayloe, who built and occupied the Octagon House; John W. Maury, Thomas Carbery, Lewis Johnson, Thomas Corcoran, William B. Todd, Alexander R. Shepherd, W. G. Metzerott, B. H. Warner, John W. Thompson, Nathaniel Wilson, Henry A. Willard, S. H. Kauffmann, E. Francis Riggs, Woodbury Blair, Thomas R. Jones, S. W. Woodward, Cuno H. Rudolph, George W. White and others.

Looking backward for 126 years, the history of the bank shows that it has survived four wars, eight serious and far reaching panics, and that of all the banks which were incorporated in 1814-1817, it is one of two which have survived to the present time.

General Motors Celebrates 25 Millionth Car

All-Day Festival For Milestone in 31 Years' History

By the United Press

Detroit, Jan. 10.—General Motors Corporation builds its 25,000,000th automobile tomorrow and in honor of the automotive milestone will stage an all-day celebration as lavish as a Hollywood premiere.

Tomorrow morning at the Chevrolet plant in Flint, Marvin E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet division, drives off a final assembly line the car embodying the productive effort of General Motors' 31-year-old history.

Virtually all the ranking G. M. officials are to be present including Board Chairman Alfred P. Sloan, jr., and President William S. Knudsen. The workers who built the auto will present Knudsen with a scroll bearing their signatures.

The festivities will continue in Detroit when 500 veteran employes and their wives from Lansing, Flint, Pontiac and other cities gather at a dinner with G. M. executives and their wives. In the evening at Masonic Auditorium 5,000 persons are expected at a "family" party featuring "The March of Men and Motors," a musical dramatization depicting G. M. history.

Knudsen told the employes the building of 25,000,000 cars was "an achievement of which all of us can be proud. It is well to remember that in no place except America could these things be accomplished."

Packard Progress

Detroit, Jan 10.—Based on a continuation of general business at current levels, President M. M. Gilman predicts profitable operations for the Packard Motor Car Co. and the industry well into 1940, at least. Reporting Packard's progress, at year's end, Mr. Gilman said that during the past year, the industry as a whole showed a production record approximately 45 per cent over 1938 and that during the same period Packard enjoyed an increase of 50.2 per cent. Car shipments for 1939 totaled 76,366 units to a total cash value of approximately $60,000,000.

York Ice Sales 47% Over Year Ago

York, Pa., Jan. 9.—Sales volume of the York Ice Machinery Corporation for the first quarter of its fiscal year is 47 per cent ahead of the same quarter last year, reports William S. Shipley, president. Orders booked for the three months ending December 31, 1939, were $3,588,629 against $2,438,946 for the same period last year.

"This additional business," Shipley said, "is partly the result of increasing activity in the field of large-scale air conditioning."

Market Agency Sells 540,000 Lbs. of Butter

Chicago, Jan. 10.—News that 540,000 pounds of butter had been sold today by the Dairy Products Marketing Association to the trade helped lift butter futures and spot prices to the best levels in about two years.

Sales by the federally financed Producers' Cooperative of "even-normal granary" butter followed sales yesterday of 240,000 pounds. The D. P. M. A. now holds about 9,500,000 pounds of butter.

London, Jan. 10.—A further reaction in gilt-edged securities influenced an easier trend in the balance of the stock market today. Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech Tuesday introduced a note of caution. Industrial leaders closed with losses and initial inquiry for kaffirs subsided. Home rails countered the main price current with fair gains. Commodity stocks moved listlessly.

Paris—Bourse quotations were slashed from start to finish today. One rente issue, the dollar guaranteed loan, slumped 10.60 francs. Turnover was at low ebb despite the favorable impression created by Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech.

Amsterdam—The bourse leveled off late today after early minor losses. Domestic issues displayed most resistance.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed unchanged to 2 points higher today. Trade and speculative demand balanced hedging and liquidating sales.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Two New England bridge enthusiasts separately brought an identical ruffing play to the attention of a Boston expert, Frank K. Perkins, recently. An illustrative deal is shown in today's box, on which declarer eliminated two losers by this neat method of establishing discards. Plan the play yourself before reading how it was done.

Declarer could see immediately that he must lose a heart, therefore, to win his contract he must find some way of avoiding losing also a diamond.

If he could win both the king and queen of hearts after losing a trick in the suit, he would have the two discards necessary for his two losing diamonds. The low club he could trump in dummy. But it was clear that East must have the heart ace and by making the normal play of the heart king or queen he would forfeit an honor and have only one discard. There was a chance, however, inasmuch as West's lead looked like a fourth-best opening that he could ruff out East's ace and establish discards that way.

Declarer ducked the first heart lead, letting East win the trick with the ten. He won the return of a club and trumped a club in dummy. He played the ace and king of spades and ruffed a low heart in his hand felling the ace. The last trump was drawn and dummy's king and queen of hearts were established for discards.

A next-door neighbor listened in on the opening broadcast of the "Court of Missing Heirs" on the Columbia network—So David Barry of Long Beach, Calif., is on his way to collect an estate valued at $45,000.

The second case presented on the program dramatized the search for Carl Henry Proehl, formerly of Minneapolis, whose mother, Emma Proehl, left him a legacy of $45,000 when she died October 19, 1935. The "Court" asked listeners who knew of Proehl's whereabouts to communicate immediately with "Court of Missing Heirs, Box 705, New York City."

The next day an air-mail special delivery letter from Barry's next-door neighbor was delivered to the "Court." Barry, the letter said, was really Proehl—he had changed his name. Proehl had communicated with his mother since his disappearance in 1925, had even returned to Minneapolis in 1934, but pride had prevented a visit to his home there—he had always wanted to come back as a success.

The "Court" turned over the letter to Anthony H. Sanzenback, of Minneapolis, administrator for Mrs. Proehl's estate, and Mr. Sanzenback went to the West Coast to check on the proof offered for Barry's claim. After an exhaustive investigation, Barry has been accepted as the Carl Henry Proehl to whom Emma Proehl willed $45,000. He is on his way now to Minneapolis to collect the legacy.

The "Court of Missing Heirs" broadcasts are heard every Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. E. S. T., over WJSV.

apter 41

SHE WAS STILL frightened, he ew, when she went up to bed, d she left the next morning. He ew that the departure was final, at she was taking herself out of life for good. He tried to feel me regret when he kissed her. a sense he did, at that. She was e last tie he had to his former e. She had destroyed him, doubly stroyed him; but she was Katie, d once she had loved him.

"Good-bye, my dear, and be ppy."

She looked at him. "Happy!" she id. "With my life knocked to eces! I suppose I just don't under- nd you, Chris. Maybe I never d."

She went away on that, not look- g back, leaving him alone in that ring garden, with his useless hand cked in his pocket, with the wind ffing his hair, and with a strange, rmented look in the eyes which llowed her until she was out of ght.

Now at last he was alone, stripped re of everything, even his pride. at night for the first and only ne since he had been appointed to hospital staff, he drank himself o a stupor. Then and only then managed to sleep.

KATIE got her divorce in Reno t fall. She wrote to Chris asking r it, and he drew against his pidly diminishing bank balance to ance it. He sent the check and en went for a long walk through e bare farm lands. Long ago he d known that no man could vel two roads at once, yet he had ed it and failed. And long ago o he had walked through an tumn day like this, watching the aves scurrying before his feet and inking that Nature went about r business prosaically, and with- t emotional nonsense; that only ankind cluttered up its life with notional disturbances—pity, ro- ance, grief and passion. He was ung then, or he would have added morse to the list. He had let Katie her headstrong way, too busy d too self-engrossed to check her. ere had been good stuff in her, d he had let her go.

Fourteen years. For 14 years ris had loved one woman, and r most of that time he had been arried to another one. The human art was a strange thing, he ought. It could go through the stures of love with one woman d yet hold the image of another. craved freedom and yet dreaded be alone; and he who had craved eedom for so long now had it, and meant nothing to him.

He was ready for bed and about take the final drink which would low him to escape when he heard e banging of an old car coming his neglected driveway, and went wn to the door. One of the village en was there, a worried little man, say that his baby had the croup, d would the doctor look at the ild.

"My wife's scared, Doctor. I don't ke to bother you, but if you'd me and take a look—"

"I'm not practicing; but I'll come, course."

He went upstairs to throw on me clothes, and on his table sat at bottle of his. He stood for a oment surveying it. Then he went eliberately to the window and up- ded it.

When he went downstairs again, ere was a grim smile on his face. All right," he said. "Let's go."

He picked up his bag with his ft hand and went out into the cool arkness.

He spent most of that night by e child's bed in a small village ouse, content to be there, to hear e long crowing intake of air grow ss stertorous and change into ormal breathing, until finally the aby slept. When at last he emerged nto the dusk of a wintry dawn, is face showed fatigue, but there as a new set to his shoulders. nce more he had made a fight— mall as it was—and won it. He urled the empty bottle that day in Letitia's garden, along with several of its fellows. That phase was over, thank God!

But if one was over, another was beginning. The news went around the countryside that he was available, and little by little after that the country people began to come in. He had no hours, there was no sign on that door of David's. But they came, afoot, in ancient buggies, in mud-spattered cars.

At first he made no charge. Then, finding that this hurt their pride, he let them pay him old David's prices: $1 for an office call, $2 for a visit. At the end of the first month he found he had taken in $20, and was instantly back to those first days of practice in the city, and his statement to Beverly that he had made the same amount.

Noel, coming home that year for Christmas, found him cheerful and more talkative. His right arm still hung useless for all practical purposes, but he was increasingly adept with the left. The boy helped him in the office, interested and filled with importance.

"Now watch this, Noel. Catch the end, will you? Righto. Hold it tight. That's the way."

The bandage would go on, snug and sleek with the boy's help, and like the bandage Chris felt his hold on life tightening.

He added another Christmas to his list that winter, with Hiram and Noel cutting down a tree in the wood lot, and Chris joining them to carry it home; the horses brisk with the cold air, the tree on the sledge scraping along a snowy lane, and the two men and the boy trudging along beside it.

That night they trimmed the tree, and at last Hiram mounted the ladder and placed an ancient and dilapidated angel on the top. When at last he came down, he looked around him sheepishly.

"The old man always said a prayer about now," he said. "We might just be quiet for a minute anyhow."

CHRIS MISSED Noel when he went back to school. But he was increasingly busy. The country people came in increasing numbers. Sometimes at night a car or a buggy would stop under his window, and he would find himself jolting along through the darkness.

Something hard and tight in his chest began to soften; his smile was more spontaneous, his voice more gentle. Here again were the intimate contacts of his early days in practice. It did not matter that he was still earning less than it cost him to live. What mattered was that he had found a place for himself, small as it was.

But he was lonely, lonely as he had ever been before in his life. There were long hours empty even of sound, for Mrs. Miller went home after his early supper. Snow came again in January, clogging the roads, banking up against his windows and cutting off most of his outlying cases. He cut a path to the woodhouse and one to Mrs. Miller's cottage, but with one arm it was slow, heavy work. He would put a foot against the shovel, push it under the snow, and loosen it. Then a little at a time he could lift it out of the way. His back ached at night with weariness, his hand showed blisters; but he kept doggedly on.

Then just as he had finished, the snow melted, leaving his work for nothing. The roads turned into seas of mud, the paths became small streams of water. Mrs. Miller, plowing along her road, caught a cold which turned to pneumonia, and he had a long fight for her life.

It was on a day when Mrs. Miller was still sick and things had gone very badly indeed that he opened the front door to find the village taxi driving away and Beverly on the porch.

"I'm here, Chris," she said simply. "What are you going to do with me?"

He stood still looking at her. "Do with you, my darling?" he said. "I'm going to love you all my life, and I'm going to send you back by the next train."

But he opened the door, and she came in. She did not look about her—like Katie. She looked only at him, and suddenly there in the hall she put her arms around him and laid her head quietly on his shoulder.

"My poor Chris," she said. "Don't send me away. I couldn't bear it. Isn't it time I stayed, Chris? Isn't it time, darling?"

Chris held Beverly there against his shabby coat, held her as if he could never let her go again. Then groaned and released her. She was very pale, and suddenly she sat down on one of Letitia's old hall chairs as though she could not stand. She tried to smile, however.

"It wasn't easy to do this, Chris."

"Just sit there, darling. Sit there and let me look at you. I've wanted to see you, God knows; but now that you're here, what am I to do with you?" he said. "You can't stay. I'm alone here, Beverly."

"Does that matter, if you need me? Or don't you need me, Chris? Maybe it's too late—I don't know." She slid off her coat and her hat and ran her hand across her forehead, as if to steady herself. "It's time to be honest, isn't it? All these years, and no real honesty between us! I don't know what is true now."

"You can take it from me, my dear," he said quietly, "that what was true once is still true, but things are changed. I don't want compassion. I don't even . . ." He hesitated. "I am building myself a life of sorts here, and you must try to get my point of view. I can work this out alone. I can even support myself in a small way. But you—"

"I don't fit into the picture. Is that it?"

"Listen, my darling," he said almost violently. "I'm managing. I'm finding myself, if there is such a thing. I grope a bit; that's natural. But I can't support a wife, and no woman in the world is going to support me. Not even you, my dear.

"You're sacrificing me to your pride, Chris. Is that fair?"

"I seem to recall that you did something of the sort to me once."

"I suppose that ends it," she said drearily.

"Not at all." He smiled again. "You're coming in to a fire, and I'm getting you a cup of tea."

She followed him into the back office and watched him while he built up the fire. He was amazingly adroit with his left hand, drawing up a chair for her, picking up wood, even sweeping the untidy hearth.

She lay back in that big chair of David's as if she were exhausted, watching him and feeling his deliberate, cheerful aloofness like a curtain drawn between them. She felt that she could not go on, that she had reached the end of a road which after all had led her nowhere. She sat quite still while he went out to the kitchen.

"Sorry," he said when he came back. "I'm a careless sort of a brute, and you've had a long trip. If you can endure the sight of the upstairs—it's worse than this—you'd better go and wash up."

He let her go alone, watching her from below with inscrutable eyes—her slim body, her curious air of breeding, her high-held head. Every atom of him groaned for her, to hold her and keep her; but not there, not in that house through the long winter days, not in his life as it was and would be. When she stopped at the top of the stairs and looked down, he was smiling up at her.

"My room is straight ahead," he said, "and I'll try to run down a clean towel somewhere."

SHE STOOD inside his door, looking about her. There was the wide bed, with the Star of Bethlehem quilt spread awkwardly over it. On the old maple chest of drawers were his small necessities, the few things a man requires. Beside the bed was a table with an oil lamp and a book, and on the floor was a pair of muddy boots. She put her hand to her throat. So this was his life now, this cold, bleak room stripped to the bare requirements of living!

She went over and put her hand on a pillow, touching it lightly and gently, her eyes filling with tears. Then she went back to the mirror and stared at herself. She looked like her mother, she thought. She was not young now. She was in her thirties. A woman, not a girl; and it was the girl that he had loved, not her.

"Clean towel in the bathroom," he called, "and tea below when you're ready."

"I'm coming."

She ran a comb automatically through her hair, bathed her eyes with cold water, and went down the stairs again. Her hat was in the hall, and she carried it with her into the room.

"You'd better look up a train for me, Chris."

"Tea first. And do you mind cutting the bread? I'm awkward with a knife. Funny, when you think of it! I used to be pretty good with one!"

He had drawn a small table to the fire and put a clean cloth on it. The teapot was there, the cups and saucers, a loaf of fresh bread and a pat of butter.

"Pretty quick work, if I do say it," he said cheerfully. "But a pretty slim tea. Next year I'll be better organized, of course. Noel says I'm to keep chickens and have a vegetable garden."

"Noel? Who is Noel?"

He was shocked into silence for a moment. He poured out a cup of tea and placed it in front of her.

"I'd forgotten, Beverly. I'm sorry. Noel is Ursula Martin's child, and a fine boy he is. The Hiram Mortimers adopted him long ago. He's like their own son now, and I wish to God he were mine."

"Don't be sorry. Why shouldn't I know? I have often wondered, Chris. And it doesn't hurt any more. Don't think that."

But for a moment the ghost of Jerry was between them. Chris was talking quickly, driving away Jerry, talking of a man, a boy, and a dog through the summer days; trudging the fields, fishing, and digging among Letitia's flowers. Beverly felt faintly jealous.

"I suppose," she said, "that no mere woman could break into that triumvirate!"

"We got along. The going was poor sometimes, but we managed."

"And the woman? Has she got to go along by herself, Chris? That's rather worse than poor, you know."

He was standing in front of the fire, looking down at her, filling his eyes with her before he let her go forever.

"Why alone? You're young and very lovely, Beverly. It isn't too late to make a life for yourself."

"I don't want it without you, Chris."

"You don't know what you are talking about. You don't belong here. I do, or I shall in time. And one thing's certain, Beverly, I can't support you, and the last vestige of pride I've got would be lost if I let you support me. When things get better, if they do——"

The Federal Diary:

Congressmen Forgive GPO, Colleagues

House Group's Failure To Observe Protocol Pies-Up Record Plans

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

When amends have been made for the outraged dignity, trespassing on the preserves, and usurping the sacred prerogatives of the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing, the Nation's taxpayers may be saved $135,000 a year.

This happy economy, not to mention an added saving on the taxpayers' eyes, will probably result by the next session of Congress, when the Congressional Record may appear in a three column format instead of the present two-column make-up.

The joint committee, it was learned yesterday, is a magnanimous body of statesmen, willing to forgive and forget—after it has salved its ruffled feelings by slapping back the ears of the offending House Appropriations Committee.

Background of the Case

The joint committee probably will recommend the three-column format before next year, but first of all protocol must be satisfied by having the Appropriations Committee give the Government Printing Office a $135,000 deficiency grant for the present fiscal year, and an equal amount in supplementary funds to its present estimates for the coming fiscal year.

This is the background:

A year ago, the GPO figured out that by printing The Record in three-column format it could reduce the size of the publication by about 16 per cent. "White space," in the form of short lines and heavy "leading" between lines, could be saved if the printing appeared in the width of ordinary newspaper columns, rather than half again as wide, as at present.

In hearings for the present year's appropriations, the GPO explained its plans to the appropriations group, and said it was therefore asking for $135,000 less to print the Record. The Appropriations Committee thought it was a fine idea, and approved the reduced estimates.

Hauteur Steps In

The next step was to obtain approval for the change from the Joint Committee. Individually, the members thought it was a good idea. But all agreed that the brashness of the GPO in getting an idea all by itself, and the egregious insolence of the appropriations crowd in approving it, should be met with due hauteur.

Approval was withheld.

The result is that the GPO was left holding the bag of an expensive format with a reduced appropriation. It must obtain a deficiency appropriation for the current year, and get an equal amount added to its estimates for 1941.

When this has been done, however, and, in the words of Ansel Wold, joint committee clerk, everything is re-established on a "businesslike" basis, the joint committee is expected to give favorable consideration to the change.

Money Won't Be Needed

If it does, the laboriously achieved supplemental appropriation of $135,000 for 1941 will not be needed. Then the joint committee can turn over this saving to the United States Treasury, righteously acknowledging public plaudits for its sagacious invention and clever economy.

The Civil Service Commission yesterday announced its second annual examination for junior professional assistants, $2,000 a year, in 28 optional branches. The examinations are specially designed for recent college graduates and this year's university senior students. Applications must be filed not later than February 5.

The optional fields in which the examination will be given are administrative technician, agricultural economist, agronomist, animal breed, archeologist, archivist, wildlife biologist, chemist, engineer, entomologist, forester, geographer, information assistant, legal assistant, librarian, metallurgist, meteorologist, olericulturist, plant breeder, poultry husbandman public welfare assistant, range examiner, rural sociologist, social anthropologist, soil scientist, statistician, textile technologist and veterinarian.

The Central Statistical Board is in the process of compiling a "Who's Who of Government Statisticians," to serve as a handy directory as well as a mean of letting scientific societies know who the unpublicized but toiling experts are.

In the couse of its assemblage of the names, the board sent requests to each Federal establishment, asking for a list of those employes engaged in statistical and research work. Most agencies readily responded.

But not the Maritime Commission. It advised the board that if anyone wanted statistical information he should address himself to the commission's research director, A. H. Haag, and that no other names would be made public.

Sugar Heiress Sues for $265,965

GERALDINE SPRECKLES, sugar heiress and film actress, contends in a $265,966 suit that a Beverly Hills, Calif., store should have told her a lounging robe she bought was highly inflammable. Bird Handouts Asked by U. S. Till Snow Melts

Crumbs Sought to Keep Feathered Friends Alive Until Spring

The Department of Agriculture yesterday appealed to residents in the Capital area to provide plentiful "handouts" for birds which failed to take wing for Southern climes at the beginning of winter.

With their natural feeding spots covered by snow, birds are having a difficult time finding food, the department reported.

Anything from breadcrumbs to table scraps will be welcomed. Remaining all winter in the District, Maryland and Virginia area are a dozen kinds of birds, the department said. These include sparrows (song, tree and white throated), cardinals, mocking, blue jays, starlings, a variety of the titmouse and white-breasted nuthatch, chickadees and purple finches.

The birds are in particular need of scratch feed—just plain chicken grain will do, said the department experts.

Probably the best artificial food of all, however, is suet. A few pieces of suet will make a banquet for any number of hungry birds. Crumbs and scraps may be sprinkled or scattered on top of the snow, but it is best to clear a place on the ground.

Although the Department of Agriculture has its own bird preserves, generous support from the public will help feathered wildlife survive a severe winter.

Banking Ethics Described at Trust Inquiry

By the Associated Press

How investment banking ethics may operate to prevent one banker from taking business held by another was described to the Monopoly Committee yesterday by a group of New York security underwriters.

Ethical considerations, they said, made some bankers reluctant to accept business customarily placed with another firm, unless the firm losing the business was first consulted or there was evidence that the borrower and his former banker could no longer continue in a "happy relationship."

Lewis L. Staruss and John M. Schiff, partners of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Joseph R. Swan, of Smith, Barney & Co., contended, nevertheless, that there was competition in the investment banking business, although they expressed disapproval of "shopping around" on the part of borrowers or of "price competition."

That type of competition, they said, would be disadvantageous to the borrower and the investing public as well.

The discussion of "spheres of influence" customarily enjoyed by major banking firms grew out of 1935 negotiations over a security issue between Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the Armstrong Cork Co.

The Armstrong Co. had formerly done business with the Guaranty Co., securities affiliate of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York. Following the enactment of the 1933 banking act which required divorcement of commercial and investment banking, many of the major officers and staff members of the Guaranty Co. went with E. B. Smith & Co., which later became Smith, Barney & Co.

E. B. Smith & Co., testimony showed, was recognized as a successor to the Guaranty Co. because of its contacts with former accounts of Guaranty.

Therefore, the Kuhn, Loeb officials said, when they were approached by an intermediary about doing Armstrong financing, they sought assurance that they would not be breaking up a "satisfactory relationship" between Armstrong and E. B. Smith.

Strauss testified that Armstrong officials "satisfied any qualms I might have had on that point," however, so that he telephoned E. B. Smith Co., notified them that he had obtained the Armstrong financing and asked if they wanted a share.

E. B. Smith & Co. officials, however, told Strauss they believed "Armstrong to be our business," a memorandum said, and "Strauss said if that were so Kuhn, Loeb would not compete, and that he would so inform the Armstrong people."

"If a company wants to change bankers that's their privilege," Schiff declared, "but as long as there is a satisfactory relationship we're not going to try to steal the business away."

Tickets for Finn Benefit Show Continue to Pour In

"Overwhelming" response for the Finnish relief showing of "Gone With the Wind" at the Palace Theater January 27 was reported yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., chairman of the Washington unit of the relief fund.

Father Walsh said that several persons had bought blocks of seats and others had sent large checks with requests for seats regardless of price. He said the prices of tickets will be announced Monday.
